WOMEN IN 'BUSINESS.

By Edith Decaley

Woman's entry into business life has been revolutionary. The break-up of the old order of things, due to the war, gave woman her opportunity, and she grasped it eagerly. The effect can now be seen in her success in nearly every branch of commercial life.

This state of affairs is not a challenge to men, but rather a co-operative participation in the nation's work. It is really a return to primitive times when men and women worked side by side to retain their place in the early struggles of life.

The position is somewhat similar to-day, only modernised. The new world born of the late war calls for the intense co-operative effort of men and women to make good the claims, the aims, and the aspirations of the new civilisation.

"Woman and Labour," that wonderful, thought-provoking book by Olive Schreiner, and the much later work of Benjamin Kidd, "The Science of Power," have both been a great inspiration to me. No woman who reads "Woman and Labour" can be unaffected by the tremendous sincerity of its writer, nor remain unconscious of the future place of women in the work of the world.

There two books, showing how woman has finally triumphed after ages of struggle to gain recognition, must create confidence in anyone who wishes to take her place in modern business.

The position of the woman who has the goods and the gifts to offer is assured, in spite of the obstacles which still linger in her path. She is gradually turning these obstacles into opportunities.

This interesting kid-gallik sleeveless jacket may be removed, leaving a simple and smart wool dress that may be worn under a coat on other occasions. This dress is of Marsela sheer rough wool in green with a drop sleeve that adds breadth to the shoulder-line. The jacket is of grey fur.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Classic elegance is achieved by this handsome, fitted, long evening cloak done in black Lyons velvet in a medieval manner, with a modern touch in its white ermine cravat. It has elegance in its lines and fabric, and, in a very unusual manner, velvet buttons march up it in a very prim row from chin to floor. The sleeves have unusually large puffs above tight high cuffs.

The Successful Woman's Qualities

What particular qualities do successful business women display? I should say unhesitatingly all those qualities which are the possession of successful business men, together with a greater vision and a more highly-developed intuition. As a general rule, women in business are far less conservative than men and have a firm grasp of detail. Both these gifts are vital to modern business, when quick, unconventional decisions have to be given. Conservatism in business is the stifling attitude of "Let well alone; don't for goodness sake progress."

This does not mean that woman takes greater business risks, akin to gambling, but that she is more nimble-minded, more intuitive, and comes to a swift decision with easy confidence.

The argument that woman is too temperamental for modern business has been proved wrong in every case.

Highly successful business concerns to-day have women behind the scenes, filling executive positions, all of whom are displaying excellent business enterprise. Woman has shown herself equal to the task in positions involving control and authority. Her greater intuition, adaptability, and detailed human knowledge have been the gifts that have turned failure into success.

The argument that a woman is more emotional than a man in business dealings is equally fallacious. It is now recognised by those who have business dealings with women in positions of control that they are as business-like and as self-controlled as men. To gain this power woman has had to fight against great and unfair odds, and to-day she is not likely to react to her own undoing. Loyalty to her business sense would keep her consciously alert against undue emotion which would otherwise be admitting to a "certain business weakness."

Of course there is permissible emotion in a business discussion, which is the outcome of sincerity. This emotional fever has often been the determining factor in clinching a business deal of importance. All classes in the business world, in spite of the cynics, are favourably impressed by sincerity.

The Home Sense
Does woman's entry into the business-world interfere with her home sense? Not a bit. Girls and women who have had a sound business training and the experience of position are far better fitted to be the future mothers of a race requiring to be trained and nurtured from infancy in all arts of efficiency on account of the growing competition of the modern world. Every efficient mother means a better home, and a better chance for the future welfare of children, who make up the future race.

The business woman's home is not the soulless place depicted by her critics. It is efficient, with every regard to the saving of labour and the conservation of energy, thus giving greater scope for leisure, education, and healthy open-air activity. The Victorian homes bred fine men and women, but their women's work was never done.

The business housewife will not even require the kind of protection a trade union gives; she will use her efficiency and commonsense to gain for herself and her family the hours of leisure necessary to good health and personal development.

"WEEK-END MURDER"
BY GABRIEL F. FORBUSH

CHAPTER XXVII.

There was no mistaking Rosie's words. "An extra towel?" she said. "Certainly, sir, I'm sorry—"

"Just the bath." That was Pratt speaking. "I have plenty of the other kind."

Rosie's voice seemed to come from farther down the hall. Before the linen closet, probably. "I must have skipped you, sir. I can't think how. You should have had enough. I always allow for the bench. Will this do you, sir?"

"More than enough. Thank you."

"That's that!" thought Tom, exchanging glances with his wife. "But it doesn't necessarily mean—after all, he shares the bath with DeVos. Would he take it for granted he was short one, though, and ask Rosie for another if the missing one hadn't been his own? Rosie doesn't forget—and I'm sure Blinks tells her to leave plenty."

"I do," agreed Linda when at the sound of the door closing they turned with one accord to each other. "But I'm a little low on towels just now and having all these extra people has cramped me a bit. But I told Rosie to let me know if she needed any more."

"Would she be apt to forget anyone?"

"Never! It's her regular routine. She wouldn't vary it."

"There's a double supply needed there."

"She'd remember."

"Then you think—?"

"I think I found that missing towel in Mr. Statlander's hamper. And I know it was the one that went round my neck."

"But wherever you found it, it was Pratt who asked for another."

"Mr. DeVos might have it he hadn't. All we know is that there was one short. And that Mr. Statlander had the smelly one in his possession."

"Of the two, I'd rather be the one who asked for another than the one who had it in his hamper. Blinks, even if we have to ask him pointblank, we must learn where Statlander got it and why he hid it away."

"Marvin's gone back to his room. Tom, you were going to say something?"

He snapped his fingers in irritation. "Damn it! I wonder if I've lost my chance. I must get over to the garage, Linda. Did you see Shaughnessy?"

"No, he didn't come in with the other men. Haven't you seen him down here?"

"No, and I've been watching to be sure. I did see Rosie though, and she was going over there—very quietly and furtively, I thought, hurrying alone. She had a white package—flat like this. It's motioned in the air. "Just the size of—"

"A folded shirt," said Linda. "Exactly. She simply flew up the stairs and down again because she came right out. That made me think he couldn't be there. He couldn't have resisted a little chat even if she was anxious to get back."

"Tom, you must see that shirt!"

"I'm going now. If he's there I'll simply make an excuse—ready in 10 minutes."

"Better than that—ask him to stay, the way we have the others."

"Right! I will. But if he can't—"

"Hurry, Tom!" They were by the screen door. "I'll try to keep him if he comes this way."

Going across the lawn Averill began hastily to form the sentences. Boyce, of course—late—the others were staying the night. "No trouble at all to have you over here, old chap." Yes, that would be the line to take. But he most profoundly hoped there would be no call to take it.

About the garage brooded the silence of a deserted building. He called up from the bottom of the little flight of steps and took the precaution of knocking vigorously at the doorway which opened off the stairs at their head. Still silence—and he stepped into the larger of the two rooms, long, low, many-windowed, delightfully inviting, and, he was relieved to see, for the moment untenanted.

By the door a broad, many-cushioned couch ran parallel to the wall, reaching almost to the first of the casement windows along the front of the room. On that couch where it might have been hastily dropped by anyone in a hurry to retreat lay a fat bundle, amateurishly wrapped, and folded into the cord which tied it was a piece of paper.

Tom still stockstill, listening. Behind him, on the other side of the stairs, was the bedroom. He stepped quickly to that door, also open, and glanced into the smaller room, with windows on two sides through which the breeze from the water stirred the curtains in waving spirals. This too, was empty.

It was the work of a second to ease the folded paper from under the string and open it. The sheet, torn from a lined pad, was censored only once and the message was scribbled in pencil.

"The shirt is ruined entirely," he read. "I fixed the tear as best I could but the stains got worse not better. I hope—" the words ran closer here, at the bottom of the sheet, and Tom stepped to the window for a better light. Below he saw the road, the bit of lawn, and, beyond, the house door. Standing in it was Linda, chattering with forced gaiety, her eyes turned anxiously up to the garage windows—and just coming through the screen door was Shaughnessy.

What Rosie hoped Tom did not stop to discover. With one quick motion he was beside the bundle, tucking the note under the string, and he ran down the steps so quickly that he had time to slip from the little hall into the garage proper, so that he was emerging from its open double doors as the Irishman reached the building. Instantly he tried to think if he had left any trace of his presence upstairs. He had not been smoking, so there would be no ash on floor or window sill. No, he was safe.

FAMOUS VIOLINIST.

SUDDEN DEATH OF PROF. BURMESTER.

London, Jan. 17.

It is reported from Berlin that Professor Willa Burmester, the famous violinist, has died suddenly at Hamburg at the age of 64.—Our Own Correspondent.

Willy Burmester, was born in 1869, at Hamburg, where his father was a musician. When he was only 3, he showed a great interest in violin-playing. Soon afterwards he was presented with a small fiddle on which, without any instruction, he was able in a few days to play "Gott erhalte Franz den Kaiser" with double-stopping. When he was 4, he began to study music under his father, who was a very hard taskmaster, and developed into a prodigy. At 7 he played for the first time in public at the Elbe Pavillon in Hamburg. Later he gave concerts along with his sister in and around Hamburg.

Freiherr von Oheimdorff introduced him to the Danish conductor Niels Gade who predicted brilliant success for the boy-violinist. When he was 10, he left school in order to concentrate on his music, but continued to have lessons in other subjects. His father went on training him till 1882 when he became a pupil of Joachim at the Royal High School for Music in Berlin, where he remained until 1885.

Next year when he was 17, he began his concert tours which soon brought him an international reputation. His technical facility was for a time pushed into the foreground, but this steadily ripened into artistic power.

From 1890 to 1891 he was concert director and professor at the Sondershausen Conservatoire. Later he moved to Weimar and then to Helsinki, but eventually settled in Berlin. He toured in England, America and Scandinavia. In addition to arranging small virtuoso pieces he composed a serenade for strings and a string quartet.

Lady Queenborough

London, Jan. 17.
A Paris message reports the death of Lady Queenborough, the wife of Lord Queenborough. She was a daughter of Mr. William Star Miller, of New York, who is now in Paris.—Our Own Correspondent.

Lady Queenborough was the second wife of the 1st Baron Queenborough (created 1918) formerly Mr. A. H. Paget. They were married in 1921, and have three daughters.

STILL NO NEWS.

HINKLER PROBABLY NEVER CROSSED THE ALPS

London, Jan. 17.

It is reported from Basel that Captain Hope narrowly escaped a forced landing when flying over the Jura mountains, but succeeded in returning to Basel, where he found ice in his carburettor.

Capt. Hope attempted a second flight in the afternoon, but was driven back by heavy clouds.

Latest reports received by Capt. Hope from a Swiss policeman tend to indicate that Bert Hinkler was held up for some time by clouds in the neighbourhood of the Simplon

SONG AND PIANO RECITAL.

FINE CONCERT BY MR. AND MRS. BOWES-SMITH

An outstanding recital of vocal and pianoforte solos was presented by Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Bowes-Smith at the Helena May Institute yesterday afternoon to a most appreciative gathering.

Mrs. Bowes-Smith's songs were in English; German and Russian; and Mr. Bowes-Smith played selections from Beethoven, Chopin and Brahms.

The opening number was Beethoven's Appassionata Sonata, one of the best known of his many beautiful works, played by Mr. Bowes-Smith. Barcarolle (Chopin) Scherzo No. 3 in C sharp minor (Chopin) and Rhapsody in G minor (Brahms) were his other presentations.

Mrs. Bowes-Smith sang Wiegand (Gretcheninoff), To the Children (Rachmaninoff), A Fair Story by the Fire (Merikanto), Morgea (Strauss), Allerscoelen (Strauss), Serenade (Brahms), Sweet Content (Peter Warlock), Nod (Temple Bevan), Fair House of Joy (Roger Quilter), A Song of the Open (Frank La Forge).

Among those present were noticed the Chief Justice (Sir Joseph Kemp) and His Honour Mr. Justice J. R. Wood.

Pass. This, coupled with lack of news from the Italian side, suggests that he never succeeded in crossing the mountains.

It is believed that Mr. and Mrs. Mollison who are expected in Switzerland shortly for a holiday, will participate in the search.—Our Own Correspondent.

RUSSIA, CHINA AND JAPAN

Issues of extreme importance are wrapped up in the exchange of Notes which has been taking place between Russia and Japan for the conclusion of a Non-Aggression Pact. They are those, in particular, which involve the future status of Manchukuo. The Japanese Government apparently thinks that the better way of preventing any border clashes with the Soviet is to devise some method of preventive regulation. Why there should be any reluctance to conclude a Non-Aggression Pact, unless there is real fear of future trouble, is puzzling. The impression gained is that Japan is somewhat suspicious of Russia. Indeed, suspicion would seem also to exist in Russia as well, since M. Stalin quite recently advocated the diverting of some of the Soviet's industrial energies to the manufacture of arms and ammunition, in view of the fact that some of Russia's neighbours (Japan obviously included) have not signed Non-Aggression Pacts. Be that as it may, for the purpose of preventing frontier incidents, Japan has suggested the formation of a Japan-Soviet-Manchukuo Committee, and the proposal is apparently acceptable to Russia. This is where the deliberations take on a serious turn, inasmuch as the creation of any such body would imply the recognition of Manchukuo by the Soviet. Very possibly this is precisely Japan's wish. But Russia, which has complained of the League treatment of the Manchurian problem, must know full well that by recognising Manchukuo she would only be further complicating the situation. Such a step would be all the more regrettable at a moment when an invitation to the Soviet to be represented on the proposed Conciliation Committee in the Sino-Japan dispute is contemplated. There is, moreover, a further point of decided importance, namely, the effect which recognition of Manchukuo would have on the relations between Russia and China. These two nations have only just resumed diplomatic contact, and in view of China's well-known attitude towards the creation of Manchukuo, Nanking obviously would be deeply offended were Russia to fall in with the Japanese plan for recognition of the new State. The whole situation as between Russia, China and Japan is at the moment very delicately poised, for which reason any change in the relations of any of the three nations one towards another needs to be very carefully watched. At any rate, Russian recognition of Manchukuo would almost inevitably lead to developments of the utmost seriousness.

Mostly About "Most"

Beware of superlatives. They are the pirates of the English language. They take to themselves things that do not belong to them. And so the person who has the temerity to assert that this is the biggest or best, the longest or loveliest, the sweetest or sourest thing in the world, should pause to approximate the effect of his statement. Recently a lexicographer named "the ton most beautiful words in the English language." And what a spanking he has been getting ever since! Here are the words: dawn, hush, lullaby, murmuring, tranquil, mist, luminous, chimes, golden, memory. It was the word "most," the malicious little bandit, the superlative, that did all the damage. The mere assertion that they are "beautiful words" would arouse little militant comment. It was the little word "most," unfurling its banner of defiance between the "ten" and the "beautiful," that made the statement the target of a broadside from the world's "best" orthographers. Driven tandem, this string of words may present a rather attractive appearance, but they may be easily associated with other words in the presentation of anything but a "most beautiful" picture. After all, there are many beautiful words, and their associations largely make them so. Even "cabbage" is, to some people, a beautiful word when it is associated with a couple of slices of lean, tender corned beef.

How the Poor Live

How often has it been proved in the social history of our time that more knowledge is the first indispensable step to improvement! Forty years ago there was no lack of good will toward the poor and desire to improve their lot; but sentiment was defeated by sheer ignorance of the conditions under which the poor lived. A pioneer step in the warfare against poverty in modern cities was taken when Charles Booth organized his house-to-house and street-by-street investigation in London, and published his survey of the "Life and Labour of the People." What a picture it revealed of poverty and deprivation in the poorer quarters—the "East End"—of London! Nearly one-third of the population of this huge area was living below the "poverty line," amid misery caused in the main not by unemployment but by brutal sweating. The forty years which have intervened have seen a change in that. A similar inquiry in the same area has been made in recent years under the direction of Sir H. Llewellyn Smith, and some of the most important results have just been published in the third and fourth volumes of the "New Survey of London Life and Labour." Most of the materials were accumulated in the year 1929—that is to say, before the present world slump in trade had produced its dire results in doubling and in some districts trebling or quadrupling the already large numbers of persons unemployed in England. The efforts of those forty years were not in vain. Of the population of this poor region—nearly 2,500,000—no less than three-quarters of a million would be living under the "poverty line" if the conditions were still the same as in Booth's time. Actually, in 1929 the number was about one-quarter of a million. Those "under the poverty line" are persons subject to conditions of privation which, if long continued, would deny them all but the bare necessities. It is indeed rightly recorded as a "grim" fact that there should still have been one-tenth of the population living under these conditions. But the reduction of the number is striking evidence of improvement. It is also a fact well worth noting that the amount of deprivation due to "sweating"—which accounted for most of the poverty a generation ago—was in 1929 almost negligible; wherever it occurs to-day it is generally due, not to offending employers, but to lack of employment. Even this hardship is modified, as it was not then, by old-age and other pensions, and by unemployment insurance. The poverty which the new surveyors discover in East London is due to inability to find jobs; and it is established by this inquiry that most of the unemployed "genuinely wish to obtain work."

HAS YOUTH MISSED ITS CHANCE?

By ROBERT BERNAYS, M.P.

The loudest cry in the post-war world has been that youth has not been given its chance. It cannot be said of the present British Parliament.

The dominant impression that any visitor to the House of Commons retains to-day is of hordes of young men, earnest, well groomed, and all looking exactly alike.

There are more men under 35 in the present Parliament than in any within the memory of man. Youth has certainly had its chance in politics. What is interesting to study is whether it is taking it. A year has gone by since the national tide swept us back to Westminster a little bewildered at the extent of our victories. Most maiden speeches are over now. The bunch at the first hurdle has thinned out and it is possible to see who are likely to forge ahead. It is strange how scanty is the field.

Dumb Dogs of the Past

Admittedly it is an unprofitable business trying to spot future Prime Ministers. They spring from the circumstances of the time far more than from their speeches in the past. Who would have imagined that Campbell-Bannerman would have led the Liberal Party to the greatest victory in its history or that the by-election victor of Bowdley in 1908, who was almost completely silent through the most exciting six years of our Parliamentary history, was to be twenty years later the triumphant leader of post-war Toryism?

At the same time it is a little disturbing to-day that there is not a single young man whose rising to speak when it is reported in the smoking rooms arouses, except among his friends, a flicker of interest.

Not "Good Form"

One reason is that we are as yet too timid. We are cursed with the public school code of obedience to our betters. Are there not over a hundred Etonians in the House and nearly half as many Harrovians? I remember being sharply pulled up some months ago by a senior member for some criticism I had seen fit to make of a Cabinet Minister. "Who are you to attack?" I was indignantly asked. "You have not been here six months yet." It was said in exactly the tone of voice with which small boys who venture to speak in their School Debating Society are reminded that they have not even won their House Rugby colours yet.

But that kind of mentality, amusing though it is, has had a bad effect on the vitality of this Parliament. We are all much too inclined to apologise for ourselves. Question time has become largely the affair of the old men. Most of us would as soon wear brown boots with a blue suit as indulge in a little healthy heckling of the Government Front Bench.

Trained Gladiators

Indeed, we seem hardly to dare to put down questions at all. It is quite an event when question time extends its full allotted hour. If there is a revolt against a Government Bill, such as the London Traffic Bill, it is never the young men who take the lead. The adjournment motion every night provides obvious opportunities for members to raise legitimate grievances. I have not once heard a young member take advantage of it.

Yet for the cut and thrust of Parliamentary debate we ought to be admirably equipped. None of us has any excuse for the inferiorly complex which makes the change from the sweeping orations of the street corner to the subtle debating points of the House in Committee such a terrible ordeal to many new Labour members. Many of us have already crossed swords with one another in university debating societies. There are no fewer than 13 ex-presidents of the Oxford Union in the present House of Commons.

What They Have Missed

Many excuses can be made for us. A large proportion of us, in addition to our Parliamentary work, have to earn our own living. This means that we cannot give the minute attention to points of procedure and the intricate details of a Parliamentary Bill which alone can make the complete Parliamentary swordsmen. Moreover, the great questions of the day—debts, currency problems, disarmament—unlike the old dividing questions of Home Rule or the House of Lords, or land taxes, are necessarily fought out at international conventions rather than on the floor of the House of Commons.

All the same, even on the questions of the hour that remain our concern, there is lamentably little evidence of independence of thought. Perhaps the conditions of the last election are to blame. So many members were spared that gruelling apprenticeship to public life that prolonged prospective candidatures in hopeless seats provide. We tend to adopt in toto the party view on all questions because we have not had the experience to enable us to form any other.

What Happens to Rebels

Where there is independence of thought there is the greatest reluctance to break from the pack. Rebel views do not extend beyond the lobbies. Inside the Chamber all is uniformity and good form. I could count on the fingers of one hand the number of young men who say the same thing inside the Chamber as they say out of it.

All the pressure that has been exerted on this Government has been from the older men in the direction of making it Conservative. There has been little compensatory pressure on the other side to keep it National.

What is needed is another Fourth Party. Lord Randolph Churchill was only 31 when he sprang into fame as the leader of the group that changed the face of English politics for a generation.

But there is plenty of time.

We young men in our first year may have created an impression of disappointment. There are at least three more years left to correct it.

The Very Idea!

FORWARD THE LOTOL!

By Eddie B. Kelly Apurist.

According to a Canadian report, a shipment of 5,680,000 bees from Taber, Alberta, left Vancouver on November 19 for Canton.

Some trouble has been experienced at Canton since the bees were delivered, as a hasty count has revealed that only 5,679,997 were landed.

The Anzac Company has been commissioned to investigate the matter, with a view to discovering the missing bees.

We notice that some 800 queen bees were included in the consignment. Which reminds us of the chap who was born a B. and died a queen. . . . Oh Yeah! Japanese reinforcements are being rushed to Canton, and the situation has increased in intensity following the action of the Japanese authorities in presenting a demand to the Chinese Government for the immediate retirement of this new force.

A protest has been lodged with the League of Nations, which will meet next month to consider the new development, and a commission, under Lord Bee-verbrook, has been authorised to make a report. The Japanese threaten to spray Canton with Lotol if their representations are ignored.

We will now draw to a close by merely saying that what the devil people can see in this rubbish beats Mr. Edward Kelly, the well-known author, journalist, man about town, and member of the Hongkong and Shanghai Clubs, with crossed gules on a field argent or, with roaring lions, and unicorns with horns reversed.

Are you suffering from a unicorn? Don't use the dangerous razor—one drop of Footle Tootele, and it lifts right out! No pain. Send for a free trial gallon, also our free booklet, Corns, Unicorns, Bicornes, Popcorns, Acorns. . . Steady! Steady! Control yourself. Bee your age!

NON-STOP VARIETY.

"Free to-night?" grins Jupiter to Venus. "Why not stop across to the old Terrestrial?"

"What's the programme, Jupe?" "Non-stop. And not a bad show either." He glances at the Planetary News:

"The Terrestrial" (he reads). "Continuous Variety. Conference on Manchuria. Conference on Debts. Conference on Disarmament. Conference on Tariffs. Committee of Nineteen on Manchuria. Conference on Reparations. Conference on Money. Conversations between two Premiers."

"And then?" asks Venus. "Why, then it starts again. Conference on Debts, Conference on Disarmament, Sino-Japanese dispute discussion, and so on." "Come on, Jupe, I'm with you. I just love slapstick."

SOCIETY NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Kyte, accompanied by three amahs and her pet Chow, Peeps, have left No. 701 and will be away for some weeks, or fortnights. Letters for Mrs. Kyte should be sent Poste Restante. Letters for Peeps should go to the Vet's.

The Duchess of Kowloon has returned to Viper's Bungalow from Shumchun. Her funds ran out unexpectedly. Three times the 2 turned up in succession when she was banking on 4's.

The Duke of Kowloon has also returned, from Macao, having received an urgent message from the Duchess.

Sir Circumference de Tong, who has not been well of late, has gone to take the waters and a few snapshots at Fanling. Who cares?

WE'RE SUSPICIOUS.

"Dear Edward Kelly," writes a correspondent, "I know you have opinions on most things (this strikes us as suspicious, the thin edge of the wedge, left-hand, so to speak) 'Would you not agree with me that our wild flora here is remarkable in its variety. What are our most attractive wild flowers. I am sure that your views on this subject would interest your readers.'"

A challenge, huh? Well we do regard ourselves as an expert, but we don't think our opinions have any greater value than those of any other experts. But here goes. Our Loveliest Wild Flowers.

Wild Rose.
Wild Rose (Incanivinus Omnes)
Purple Goatsbeard.
Pansy San. (Incanus Superbus).
Hyacinth (though she's usually more mad than wild)

As regards this last, we believe she had a commoner name, but we haven't seen her for three months and we do not trust our memory.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[To the Editor, Hongkong Telegraph.]

Sir,—May we, as an initiative group of resident householders and shopkeepers, foreign as well as Chinese draw through the columns of your valued paper, the attention of the Authorities and all concerned to a matter of vital public importance which fully warrants immediate action, and that is, the reduction by Government Legislation of all Rents for private residences, Shop premises and other accommodation, by from 30 to 50 per cent, as it has already been done in other neighbouring cities, in view of a permanent allround decline in the income of the population, as shown in the following.

It is common knowledge that the average income of practically the whole population, with the exception of the several huge combines owning a great number of houses in Hongkong, and smaller house owners, also perhaps the Owners of some Hotels and a few Private Hotels, has decreased visibly by 20 to 50 per cent, and this decreased standard of the people's income has now definitely reached permanency. Salaries everywhere have been reduced by 10 to 50 per cent, of all Government Servants as well as of Commercial employees. Firms and Shops, even old established ones, have already, and are still more reducing their Staffs, a number have closed down, others have their mere living only, and the number of the impoverished and fully or part time unemployed shows a considerable increase. Thus it is evident that the whole of the Foreign and Chinese population finds it ever more difficult to continue to pay the present Rent rates, as they are very perceptibly encroaching upon that narrow margin left for absolute necessities, as food, health, clothing, schooling, bus and ferry, books and cultural needs. The present day exorbitant house rents averaging $30 to $100, for three roomed and $100 to $150 for four roomed flats, and shop rents averaging from $150 to $400—and far more, date from previous, more abundant times, but are utterly out of date and hit therefore all working and trades people of the Colony very hard to-day. Other Cities have promptly taken measures to limit charging too high rents, by decreasing the rents from 30 to 50 per cent. Singapore, has done so, also Manila, we learn, and in Shanghai the rents have already been lowered by 30 to 50 per cent. for residences and shop premises. This present state of affairs, where a comparatively small section of the population owning houses, have a free hand to interfere with the wellbeing of perhaps 97 per cent of the population who are tenants, by imposing far too high for our present times rents, demands the immediate attention of the Government and all concerned, and it is the purpose of this open letter to call all residents Associations, Tenants, Shopkeepers and Firms to come forward and to take effective steps that all Rents in the Colony be reduced by Government action or otherwise by 30 to 50 per cent. We shall greatly appreciate if other correspondents will likewise offer their views and recommendations in the columns of your valuable paper, for a concerted action towards an immediate and permanent reduction of rents throughout the Colony, and for the safeguarding of such Rents reduction.

"THE HONGKONG NATURALIST"

LATEST ISSUE FULL OF INTEREST

A new issue of the "Hongkong Naturalist" has come to hand, and embodies a great deal of informative material, of the high standard which one has come to associate with this journal. The issue is a combination of Nos. 3 and 4 of Volume III, and closes the third annual volume. Outstanding articles among the contents are those dealing with local orchids and flowering shrubs, by Dr. G. A. C. Herklotz; the archaeology of Lamma Island as revealed in scraps of ancient pottery, ably dealt with by Father D. J. Finn; and local mosquitoes, discussed by Dr. R. B. Jackson. All these, particularly the flower series, are illustrated, with both drawings and photographs of a splendid quality.

A topical article is contributed also by Dr. McCulloch, of Kwangtung, on the Chinese murex which is such a feature of China New Year, and is already to be seen on sale in the streets of Hongkong.

Other articles deal with spiders, fishes, and birds' eggs, and it is altogether a fine issue and a credit to its contributors.

POLICE CONSTABLE ARRESTED

A huge seizure of heroin pills, followed by the arrest of a Shanghai constable, was made on board the s.s. Anhui on her arrival from Shanghai on January 6 last.

The Chief Officer of the ship, on its arrival in port, noticed a cooie carrying a sack, being accompanied by the constable, who was stationed on board the ship as one of the anti-piracy guards. On the men being stopped and the sack opened, five small parcels were found. One of the packages was opened and discovered to contain pills, but, except that they were bad, the No. 2 constable of the ship, was unable to inform the officer what they were.

The sack was kept by the officer and later the constable stated that the pills were the same as opium. The following day they were handed to the captain, who had not been on board the previous day. The master reported the matter to the agents who then notified the police.

The ship left for Canton and on its return the guard was detained and charged. This morning he was brought before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court and charged with being in possession of 50,000 heroin pills.

Mr. F. E. C. Rendall appeared for the defendant and Mr. W. la Bart Sparrow for the prosecution. After outlining the facts of the case, Mr. Sparrow said that in the defendant's favour was the fact that the day after the pills were seized by the officer, the constable reported for duty and drew his pay as usual.

The No. 2 constable would give evidence that during a conversation he had with the defendant subsequent to the seizure the constable asked the constable to get the pills back from the officer and to offer him some money if necessary.

The case was adjourned until to-morrow morning.

EMPIRE FAIR PROSPECTS

BIG SUCCESS TO BE EXPECTED

The Hon. Mr. J. P. Braga gave a most interesting broadcast talk last night on the coming Empire Fair in Hongkong. He spoke of the assurances of support already received and indicated that there was every prospect of a great success being achieved. No charge for space would be made, it being left to firms and individuals to make donations towards meeting the expenses of the exhibition.

Mr. Braga mentioned that, through the generosity of the Hongkong and Shanghai Hotels, Ltd., the Peninsula Hotel would be available for the fair, the ground floor lounge, the two terraces, the first floor and the newly-covered-in balcony being placed at the disposal of the Committee.

JAPAN'S REPLY

OBJECTION TO U.S. AND RUSSIA

Tokyo, Jan. 17.

With the approval of the Cabinet, it is understood that cables instructions have been sent to the Japanese delegation at Geneva to oppose the proposal to invite non-member States to participate in the Conciliation sub-committee, and to insist upon non-interference by the sub-committee in direct negotiations between China and Japan.—Reuter.

Official Statement.

After the meeting an official statement was issued as follows: "The President of the Committee of 19, M. Hyman, in his statement of December 20 declared that the Committee felt that it would not be fulfilling its duty if it did not exhaust every effort for conciliation and show the utmost patience in its endeavour to reach a settlement. The Committee of 19 to-day confirmed that view but considered that if the procedure under Paragraph 3 of Article 16 unhappily failed it was then its duty to proceed as rapidly as possible to fulfil the task laid upon them by the Assembly resolution of March 11, 1932 to prepare, if need be, a draft of the report provided for in Article 15, Paragraph 4 of the Covenant."

"At its meeting of December 20 the committee had noted that the conversations entered into with the parties by its President and Secretary-General would need certain time. No fresh proposal has been received apart from those of the Chinese Government. The Japanese delegation in its conversations with M. Hyman and the Secretary-General of the League has declared that it is communicating with its Government concerning fresh proposals that may be submitted to the Committee and has announced that it will be in a position to inform the Committee of its point of view in 48 hours."

"Deeming it necessary to consider finally and as soon as possible whether it is possible for the Assembly to fulfil its mission under Paragraph 3 of Article 15 of the Covenant, the Committee thought it necessary to accept this short adjournment."

Paragraph 3 above provides that the League shall endeavour to effect a settlement of the dispute. Paragraph 4 provides that "if the dispute is not thus settled the Council either unanimously or by majority vote shall make and publish a report containing the statement of facts of the dispute and recommendations which are deemed just and proper in regard thereto."

Geneva reports state that these recommendations under Paragraph Four would be based on the Lytton Report.

Press messages from Tokyo state that the terms of the resolution which it is the duty of the Committee of 19 to present to the League Assembly and which as a result of conversations with Geneva representatives of the parties to the dispute, has undergone some amendments since it was originally drafted before Christmas, will be considered by the Japanese cabinet to-day. Thereupon the Japanese delegation at Geneva will receive its instructions.—British Wireless.

BANISHEE GETS TWO YEARS

ADMITS BURGLARY CHARGE

Lau Ming-po appeared before the Puisne Judge (Mr. Justice Wood) at the Criminal Sessions this morning, charged with (1) burglary and larceny, (2) larceny, (3) two counts of receiving stolen goods and (4) with breach of a deportation order, he being banished under the name of Lau Sul-cheun in connexion with the last offence. Defendant pleaded guilty on all counts and elected to make no statement.

His Lordship sentenced accused to two years' hard labour in respect of the breach of the deportation order, 18 months' hard labour for the burglary and larceny, and 12 months' hard labour on the larceny count, the sentence on the deportation order to run concurrently with the other two sentences.

DRINKING AGAINST TIME

WINE CHARGED BY THE HOUR

Berlin, Dec. 15. Germans are holding that local innkeepers will adopt an idea put into practice at Trikkala, in Thessaly. There a publican allows his guests to drink as much wine as they like and charges only for the time spent on his premises—five drachmas (3d. at par) an hour. There is such a glut on the German wine market, and the advantage of sitting in a warm inn room is so great in winter, that the new method of charging might, indeed, be to the advantage of the publican in some places.

Ultimatum to Parties. Geneva, Jan. 17. It is generally considered in League circles that yesterday's decision is tantamount to an ultimatum to both parties to accept the decision of the Committee of Nineteen or abide by the consequences which will probably be confined to the adoption of the Lytton recommendations. The idea of the League resorting to Article 10 may be dismissed as significant.

Sir John Simon took the lead in suggesting proceeding with the next step if the Japanese reply were unsatisfactory, but hope prevails that the reply will offer prospects for arrangement. The elimination of the United States and Russia from the Committee of Conciliation may not prove an insurmountable obstacle but Japanese insistence on the elimination and reference to Manchukuo would almost certainly wreck the possibility of an understanding, as the small States are insistent on this point.

British Views.

In view of the rumours that the English Government has changed its standpoint on the Sino-Japanese dispute, official British quarters point out that from the beginning the British considered there were two questions which ought not to be treated together, namely, conciliation and the report by the Assembly, which should only be taken when conciliation failed. Real friends of peace in the Far East do not desire in the present last efforts at reconciliation to prejudice any possible chance of success by considering reconciliation impossible.

The Committee of Nineteen decided Japan must be given an opportunity of producing an acceptable formula resulting in a basis for reconciliation.

If the formula is unacceptable the question of the report arises. The English views thereon are clear. Sir John Simon on December 2 clearly indicated that Britain would act as a loyal member of the League, that the Covenant was a fundamental and that Britain would co-operate to her utmost with other members for conciliation acceptable to all.

The question of adopting the Lytton report would naturally arise if conciliation failed. The English attitude thereon was equally clear. The British felt the Lytton Report was the most obvious material for the report under Paragraph four of Article 15. However, it should be pointed out that the Committee must first report on the failure of conciliation to the Assembly before the Committee can be instructed to proceed with drafting the report.

Incidentally, English quarters categorically deny the suggestion that Sir Eric Drummond consulted the English Government as regards a compromise formula.—Reuter.

INTERPORT TRIAL & TRIBULATION

HAMMOND—
Who fell a victim to—

MR. JAMES RESIGNS
SECRETARYSHIP
OF L.T.A.Departure To-day on Home Leave

(By "Veritas").

MR. C. P. F. James, for nearly three years
Hon. Secretary of the Hongkong Lawn Tennis Association has resigned his position coincident with home leave.

Mr. James, who has filled the difficult role during the most important phase in the history of the Association, departed for San Francisco on the President Wilson this morning. He returns five months hence, but has already indicated that he will not be prepared again to take up the reins of office.

VALUED OFFICER.

In him, the Association has lost a very valued officer. Taking over from Mr. D. S. Green at a time when the Association was a mere name and enjoying direct interest only in the organisation of the tennis league, Mr. James assisted in no small measure in its reconstruction and reorganisation.

His work behind the scenes has been unobtrusive but of immeasurable value to tennis in this Colony.

Together with Mr. D. S. Green he was responsible for the excellent organisation of the Helen Wills Moody exhibition in 1931, and also played a leading part in the arrangements in connection with the Interport last year.

He threw his heart and soul into the task of trying to find a "home" for the L.T.A., where it might stage all championships, Interport and exhibition tennis in the Colony, and after securing a site on the Marina, Kowloon, saw the scheme fall through owing to lack of support by the members of the Association.

BRINGING BACK TROPHY.

Mr. James's interest in local tennis, however, is as strong as ever, and yesterday he told me that he intended to see Mrs. Wills Moody whilst in San Francisco and endeavour to make further progress in securing a cup in her name for local competition.

It will be remembered that when playing here, Mrs. Wills Moody expressed a desire that such a trophy should exist in Hongkong, and it is fairly safe to assume that this will materialise before the year is out.

Mrs. James, who is one of the most prominent of the Hongkong lady tennis players, and who played against Shanghai in 1929 and 1931, and was runner up in last

SELECTORS WITNESS ANOTHER FIASCO

"A TEAM ENVELOPED IN A CLOUD OF LETHARGY"

FORWARDS FAIL TO MAKE GOOD

COMMITTEE'S PECULIAR EFFORT TO SOLVE LEFT WING PROBLEM

(By "VERITAS").

"SHANGHAI will have to be a mighty poor crowd of footballers if they can't beat a team like this" summed up a spectator after yesterday's Interport trial, and after watching the pitiful display I am inclined to agree with the disconsolate observation.

So feeble was the effort yesterday by both teams—Triallists and the Borderers—to serve up football even of a mediocre calibre, that one begins to wonder whether these trial matches are being taken seriously or not.

If the idea of trials is to select the selectors in their task of picking a team according to form, then after yesterday's fiasco they have all my sympathies.

If, on the other hand, such games are merely the means of giving the players a leg-stretch, then one is wasting one's time taking them at all seriously.

Frankly the game was so boring, that if one had left at half time one would not have missed a single incident, whilst the standard of play could not stand as being complimentary to that of the Third Division.

JOHNSTON FUTILE.

Johnston's leadership of the forward line was futile, and I am puzzled as to whether the selectors really considered him if they did, then yesterday must as a likely Interport pivot. have disillusioned them. If they didn't, then why play him at all?
Introducing Johnston at centre forward meant that A. V. Gosano had to play out of position at inside right, with the result that the whole vanguard was disorganised.

If anything, E. Strange, brought in as reserve, was the brightest of the attackers, but he destroyed all his good ideas by selfishness.

He must remember that there are four other forwards, who, five times out of six, are better placed for the ball than himself.
The tragedy of the whole thing is that when he likes, he can hand out some magnificent passes. Unfortunately he doesn't "like" enough.

"SO SO" HALF BACKS.

The Gosano brothers combination on the right was fair, but not up to Interport standard, and although Santos is a clever little footballer, I am afraid he is not big enough or heavy enough to carry him past the Shanghai defence.

The half backs were just "so-so." Willing and effective in their tackling, they showed little desire to add constructiveness to their display. Leung Wing-chui was the pick, but Duncan certainly did not show better form than Bliss, and if the choice is to rest between the two for the left half position, then a toss of the coin is all that is required.

S. Strange was absent from the defence, but there was nothing amiss with this department, Allen and Blackburn adequately covering Rodgers, who had very very little to do.

Of course the poor opposition provided by the Borderers might have been in part responsible for the inglorious work of the prospective Interporters, although this cannot seriously be advanced as an excuse.

It seemed that a blanket of boredom and disinterestedness just descended and enveloped the Trial team. Anyhow, the result was painful.

SHINING LIGHTS.

The Borderers' shining lights could be counted on one hand and there would still be some fingers left over!

Podmore dominated everybody, but it was football of a purely defensive nature and contributed little or nothing towards goals.
Morrison was another who enjoyed the limelight.

Up forward the 24th were as weak as their opponents. Harris occasionally looked dangerous, but never got beyond that stage.
Jones fiddled and fuddled and forgot the elementary rule that goals are invariably obtained from shooting, whereas Duncan, his partner sent across three good centres.

Altogether a distressing match.
It should, perhaps, be added that the Trial team won by the only goal scored. A. V. Gosano notched it in the first half, neatly snapping up a forward pass and holding off Podmore whilst he placed the ball well out of Johnston's reach.

More Experiments

Podmore A Trial Forward

There is something like a gesture of despair in the latest move of the Interport selection committee. For the next trial, which takes place on Saturday, they have introduced a new left wing in the persons of Podmore and Chris Pile.

Why such an exceptionally clever half back like Podmore should be brought into the forward line, when the left half position is at present anything but satisfactory requires closer and more complex reasoning than I can give.

Podmore will probably put up a good display on Saturday, for he is a sufficiently experienced and clever enough footballer to do himself credit in whatever position he is placed.

ARE SELECTORS SERIOUS?

But again I would ask: Are the selectors seriously contemplating his final inclusion as inside left? If not, why waste their own time and the intended value of the trial by playing him there?

If Podmore is likely to be included in the Interport team, surely he should be tried out at left half?
This is one department which can well be strengthened, and Podmore is the man for the job.

Chris Pile is worthy of a trial, although I do not hesitate in opinion.

ing that the selectors have overlooked a more obvious choice in Seal of the Artillery. He may not be quite so clever and so well endowed with tricks as Pile, or Santos, or even Baldry, but he has founded his game on the principle of getting the ball into the goal mouth in the quickest time possible and in the most effective way at his command.
This is the primary job of a winger, and at the present time Seal can do it better than any other outside left in the Colony.

STRANGE WILL BE FIT.

The most welcome thing the selectors have done is to bring back A. V.
Gosano to centre forward. His happiest moments at football are spent here, for he is an ideal leader.
Perhaps, too, B. Gosano will enjoy himself more at inside right, although I think he will have to show some improvement to hold his place.

B. Strange yesterday informed me that his foot is making excellent recovery and he is assured of being O. K. for the Interport. In that case there need be no further worry about the defence.

The opposition for the trial team on Saturday will be a Chinese eleven selected by the H.K.C.A.A.F., and it is certain that the potential Inter-porters will have to give of their utmost to win.

THE TEAM.

The trial eleven will be composed of:

Rodgers:
Allen and Lau Man:
Leung Wing-chui, Pardoe and A.
Duncan:
Tang Kwok-sang, B. Gosano, A.
V. Gosano, Podmore and C. Pile.
Reserves—Marlin, Bliss, Ridley and Beltrac.

HAMMOND AGAIN PUTS ENGLAND IN WINNING POSITION AUSTRALIA'S BIG TASK

Adelaide, Jan. 17.
Ironmonger and Wall were entrusted with the ball after tea. The batmen added 69 in 10 minutes and both then opened out to the bowling.
They gave a great display of driving and after being at the wickets for 149 minutes Hammond reached his 50, which included four fours. Ley-land hit a ball from a googler and skied it to mid-on where Wall took the catch. As was the captain with the score standing at 245 for five wickets. Leyland had made 42 in 108 minutes and played an aggressive innings.

With the score at 296 Bradman relieved O'Reilly and took the last over of the day but the last ball he sent down Hammond played on after having scored 85. Ames and 18, the closing scores being 296 for six.
Hammond was powerful in his back play and clever in his plying. A feature of his innings was his characteristic driving past cover. He was at the wickets for 221 minutes during which time he collected eight four fours. Ames played a four innings and had been in for 65 minutes before play closed. He has scored two fours.

R.A.M.C. WIN A FAST HOCKEY MATCH

At Sookumpoo yesterday the R.A.M.C. defeated the 12th Battery in the Marnak tournament by the only goal scored.

Play was fast and although the Battery had the better of the exchange, they were unable to score.
The Corps' keeper played a fine game saving many goals. No score was registered at the interval.

On the change-over, the Battery continued to press, but poor shooting and the excellent defence of the Medicals prevented them from scoring. The Corps, however, greatly improved their combination, took the lead through Tarney.

In a friendly game at King's Park, yesterday, the Y.M.C.A. played a game with the Royal Corps of Signals.
The Corps opened the scoring soon after the initial bully, but before the interval the "Y" equalised through Pown. There was no scoring during the second half.

VICTORIA HOME & ORPHANAGE.

MRS. SOUTHERN'S APPEAL FOR PUBLIC SUPPORT

A year of trial and stress, which was in no way allowed to interfere with the steady and progressive work of the institution, was revealed in the annual report of the C.M.S. Victoria Home and Orphanage, read at the distribution of prizes yesterday to pupils of the school maintained by the Home.

Mrs. W. T. Southern gave away the awards, and among those present were the Bishop of Victoria (the Rt. Rev. Ronald Hall), who took the chair, Mrs. T. H. King, Dr. E. P. Minnett, Rev. A. B. Stewart, Rev. C. L. Blanchett, Rev. W. Walton Rogers, Rev. F. Foley, Rev. G. T. Waldergrave, Miss M. A. Jennings and Miss S. L. Hollis, in charge of the Home, and many friends and supporters.

Following the singing of the New Year Hymn by the pupils and a prayer offered up by a Chinese pastor, the gathering were entertained to a long programme of singing, musical drill and action songs contributed by the various classes, including the school's company of Girl Guides.

On behalf of the two Principals of the institution, the Rev. A. B. Stewart then read the annual report. In commenting on the report, the Bishop said they were grateful to God for having allowed them to share in the privilege of their little way, in the privilege that belonged to Miss Jennings and Miss Hollis, of caring for the children of God in that Home. He had been feeling all that afternoon the truth of what the Lord had said when He said they must learn from little children before they could understand Him.

He wanted to thank the two ladies for their being allowed to share with them in the privilege that day. The Bishop in referring to the new building, projected, stressed the need for public support, and enjoined on those present and members of the public generally to assist by prayer and otherwise, according to their means, in the realization of the project.

Mrs. W. T. Southern said she had a feeling, having been so long here that Hongkong would not be Hongkong without the little red book in which the annual report of the Home was issued, and always on reading between the lines of that report, she had realized the great amount of patience and work put into the Home.

It was obvious to them, continued Mrs. Southern, that the Home was not properly housed, and in view of the work of the two ladies and the great interest they took in the welfare, notwithstanding various trials, which as considered to them range from runaway girls to white ants (laughter)—she thought it really deserved support. She hoped that the public of Hongkong, ever generous in the past, would nobly respond to the appeal.

Proceeding, Mrs. Southern had a word of appreciation for Mrs. Bird and Miss Sung in connexion with the formation of the Home's company of Girl Guides, complimenting these two ladies and the girls for the progress attained in such a short time, and she announced that two friends in the gathering that afternoon had promised to bear the costs of new uniforms. One of these friends as there were girls enrolling, Mrs. Southern urged that every girl who could do so should avail herself of the support accorded. Through Guide work they would learn to become resourceful, and they would not then have any great trouble in finding something to do during the summer holidays, and leave the two ladies who had charge of them to the enjoyment of a well-earned rest. (Applause.)

LEAGUE BILLIARDS.

Sergeant Davey Makes An Unfinished Break of 47.

ST. PATRICK'S DEFEAT.

As reported last week St. Patrick's Club lost their first match of the season in the Steel Cullen Billiards League when they went down to the Police R.C. This is the second defeat of the leaders in four years and St. Patrick's played extremely well to defeat the Police by 91 points, especially as the latter is no mean exponent of the art, and will probably be remembered by local cueists as the captain of the Club some three or four years ago.

The C. & P.O.'s Club beat the Royal Artillery Sergeants rather easily, F/8gt. Davey making an unfinished break of 47, which ranks as one of the best performances of the season in this competition.

The Royal Engineers' Sergeants again disappointed, though they took half a point from their visitors, the Palace Hotel Club. The match was in doubt until the last, and resulted in a win for the visitors by 23 points.

The scores were:

C. & P.O. Club	R.A. Sergeants
G.P.O. Davies 150	T.R.M. Wilkes 150
G.P.O. Jenkins 141	Sgt. Willie 150

A good game was played last night when S. M. da Cruz defeated A. P. Pereira 250 points to 210 in the open billiards championship at St. Patrick's Club. There was nothing outstanding during the game, a break of 28 by the winner being the highest of the evening.

Two games will be played this evening, L. E. Remedios being opposed to W. Hill, and C/S E. Jarman to T. Gooding.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

For gripping drama and tension, few pictures to come out of Hollywood can equal "Skyscraper Souls," the latest product of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is showing from tomorrow at the Queen's Theatre. The world's tallest building—a 102-story New York skyscraper—is the locale of this novel and absorbing drama. Through the eye of the camera are shown incidents and problems, the loves, the joys, the struggles and the despair of the occupants of this building. As a result, one of the most engrossing pictures of the year has been produced. Sparkling performances and able direction by Edgar Selwyn add to the effectiveness and realism of the production. Warren William as the plant of finance whose treachery brings all in the building to disaster, and Maureen O'Sullivan, as the leading romantic figure, shine forth with renewed brilliance. There are also remarkable performances by Verree Teasdale, New York stage actress appearing in her first film, and Jean Hersholt. Just as in "Grand Hotel," Hersholt makes one of the lesser roles of the play stand out in bold relief. And then there is the skyscraper itself. Always it looms forth as an important figure in the drama. Fortunes are sought for, love is won and lost, human lives are sacrificed, heartbreak and fate are kindled again, human beings laugh and cry. And over the lives of all, this building spreads its shadow. In their mad pursuit of love and lucre the thousands of workers in the skyscraper are no many prisoners in the steel cells they call their offices. The story involves a financial magnate's attempt to use those around him as pawns in his scheme to gain ownership of the world's greatest skyscraper. There is the woman who through love, has given her life to help him succeed. There is the little stenographer whom he lures from the boy who wants to marry her. There is, too, the radio announcer in the tower of the building who tries by stealing money to hold the woman who in his whole life and loses both woman and life. All through the drama run the currents of other lives—drawn suddenly together to common ruin through the colossal treachery of the building owner. Others in the cast who perform notably are Gregory Ratoff, Anita Page, Norman Foster, George Barbier, Wallace Ford, Hedda Hopper, Edgar Selwyn, as director, has achieved the unusual in handling the action of the story, all of which takes place in a great New York skyscraper.

Brilliant Acting in "The Guardsman." Cleverness in acting, direction, play construction and lines are noticeable features of "The Guardsman," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy now showing at the Queen's Theatre. The situation of the story, by Ferenc Molnar, the highly sophisticated Hungarian dramatist, puts an immediate strain on its principals. It concerns an actor who is insanely jealous of his wife, and makes love to her in disguise, in order to test her loyalty to him. The play was an enormous success on the stage, and it has been brought to equally successful cinema fruition by the same stars, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. Lunt is the amorous, deep-voiced Russian magnificence both as the actor, and Cossack, and as the wife with the enigmatic eyes, Lynn Fontanne runs him a close race for first honours.

Next in point of performance is Roland Young, who is splendid as the Cripple, a highly amused innocent bystander. Zasu Pitts is laughable as usual, the role of comedy maid. Maude Eburne, stage actress of high repute, makes a very comical theatrical mamma. Sidney Franklin is to be commended for the smooth nature of his direction. He has faithfully transplanted to the screen all the original sophisticated charm of Molnar's play, as translated into screen form by Ernest Vajda and Claudino West. An interesting feature of the production is a "play within a play." To establish Lunt and Fontanne in the story as a successful pair of theatrical players, a single incident of Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth, the Queen" is presented on the theatre's stage. "Elizabeth, the Queen" is the success of the current season in which Lunt and Fontanne have appeared all over the country. In this play within a play Lynn Fontanne portrays Queen Elizabeth and Alfred Lunt his role of Essex.

"The Phantom President." "The best way to get on the stage to-day is to throw on your hat and walk on after it." There's more truth than humour in that statement, according to George M. Cohan, author, actor and producer, who makes it. For it is entirely without optimism that Cohan, who makes his talking picture debut with Claudette Colbert and Jimmy Durante in "The Phantom President," showing at the King's Theatre, surveys the prospect of young people breaking on to the stage at the present. Cohan, who has been a dominant figure in the American theatre for more than a quarter-century, plays two roles in his first talkie. He is first a candidate for President who lacks the personality to win votes, and second a mediocre show man brimming with personality who is hired to impersonate the former. The result is highly hilarious.

"Sob Sister." One day a plainly dressed woman collapsed in Market Street, San Francisco. A crowd gathered, an ambulance was called and she was taken to the City Receiving Hospital in the Hall of Justice Building. Thirty-six hours from the moment the doors closed upon her the headlines of the San Francisco Examiner were screaming an exposure of shocking conditions in that hospital, for the supposed sufferer was no other than Winifred Sweet, who wrote under the pen name of Annie Laurie, the original "Sob Sister," and who took this method of getting hidden news. This method of news gathering is approximated in the Fox romantic drama "Sob Sister," which opens on Thursday at the King's Theatre. James Dunn newest screen sensation, and Linda Watkins head the photoplay's large and brilliant cast. "Sob Sister" was adapted for the screen by Edwin Burke who wrote the sparkling dialogue for "Bad Girl," and directed "Daddy Long Legs".

But his urgent desire to see the freshly laundered shirt seemed now unattainable. Linda apparently had been unable to detain their guest long enough to give him a free hand, but perhaps he himself could prevent Shaughnessy from going upstairs. Then there always would be the chance that he could slip over again, unseen, and complete his investigation.

"Hello, Shaughnessy!" he called cheerfully and thought that as an actor he was improving. Not all the laurels could go to the artist Linda. "Are you coming to tell me there's a telephoning call?"

The other, not unnaturally, looked startled.

"No—there's none that I know of," he said. "I was going up stairs."

An Tom offered his cigarette case he neatly blocked the narrow door. "Thought Boyle might have been heard from," he explained. "I'm afraid we're in for the evening, Shaughnessy. That fellow's a bad egg and if he can make things uncomfortable for us he will. Has Mrs. Averill said anything about staying over?"

"No. I spoke to her just a moment ago."

"Oh, Linda!" Tom raised his voice in a rather hearty shout and thought he observed a flicker of surprise in the other's eyes. Somehow he had to keep this man downstairs and occupied until he could get back. To his delight Linda appeared at once at the door and Tom dropped his arm familiarly over the Irishman's shoulder.

"Come on back a moment," he said. "Linda—I was just telling Mr. Shaughnessy that Boyle was likely to be late."

She caught her cue instantly. "Isn't it exasperating?" she asked with every evidence of annoyance. "I'm so sorry, Mr. Shaughnessy! I've just spoken to the others and I want to ask you too—won't you stay over to-night? We should love to have you and then his being so late will make no difference."

As she repeated her invitation of a few moments before Tom managed to direct them all slowly but definitely toward the house. The effort of doing so, and preserving his ordinary outward calm brought beads of perspiration to his forehead. Now they were at the door. Linda had caught on that he wanted her to stop Shaughnessy inside—would they succeed? He hardly noticed whether the Irishman was agreeing to her request or not so desperately was he concentrated on getting the man inside and keeping him there.

Just then Rosie, like an angel of rescue, appeared at the screen door.

"Dinner is served, ma'am," she said and retired into the shadow.

With hospitable heartiness, Tom flung back the door. "Fine! I'm hungry, in spite of ten. Go ahead, Linda. Step in, Shaughnessy. Want to wash your hands?" He flung open the door of the little hall lavatory.

"Right in here," and he hurried ahead to join his wife.

"Whew, what an escape!" he whispered. "Hurry up—did I act all right?"

"You're positively pale," Linda answered hastily, hearing steps on the floor above, "but you did all right otherwise. Straighten your tie."

Tom mopped his brow. The steps were coming down the stairs. "I'll tell you later. Keep him here after dinner, Binks. I didn't

CONTRACT BRIDGE

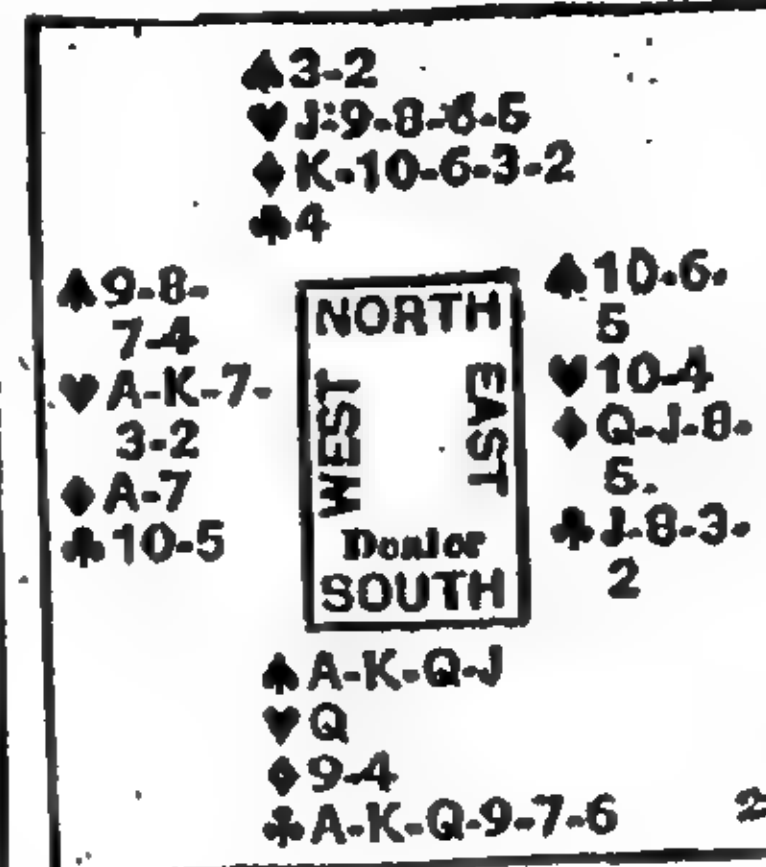

By W. E. McKenney

As I have mentioned before, the new duplicate laws provide for a 100 point premium for making a less-than-game contract. This is generally turned by the players themselves the "100 point part-score bonus."

This 100 point premium livens up the bidding, draws both sides into the bidding, and adds a great deal of colour to the game.

The new duplicate laws will not become official until Feb. 1, 1933.

It has seemed in the past that the only real thrill in contract was in making a game or slam, but now it will be just as interesting to play the non-game-going hand.

This hand was played by that famous pair, P. H. (Hal) Sims and Willard S. Karn.

The Bidding

Mr. Karn in the South opened the bidding with one club. Having two biddable suits, the longer suit is the proper bid.

West overcalled with one heart. North passed. East passed, and now Mr. Karn, in the South, bid one spade.

West passed. Mr. Sims, in the North, now bid two diamonds.

Remember that on the first round of bidding, he had passed. This bid of two diamonds clearly marks his hand: he is well satisfied to play the hand at hearts; his diamonds suit is not especially strong, and he does not have normal support in either clubs or spades.

Furthermore, his bid of two diamonds will allow Mr. Karn to select the suit at which he desires to play the hand. Mr. Karn decided that even though his club suit was six long, the honours in spades were worth the try, so instead of bidding three clubs, he decided to play the hand at two spades.

You will notice that, with this powerhouse hand, he made no attempt to force the bidding, but signed the hand off with a spade rebid. This became the final contract.

West's opening lead was the king of hearts. He then switched to a small spade. Now, how would you play the hand if you were the declarer? Mr. Karn made three odd at spades.

To-morrow I will give you another of the hands played in the national tournament, and will explain how Mr. Karn made three odd with this hand.

quite—Hello, there—here we all are! Shall we go in, Linda?" She smiled mechanically but walked forward as in a dream. Things were happening with a vengeance! How much longer would it be?

INFECTIOUS CASES

CONVEYANCE ACROSS THE HARBOUR QUERIED

The fortnightly meeting of the Sanitary Board was held yesterday in the board room with the new President, Mr. T. McGarry, in the chair, others present being the Hon. Mr. R. M. Henderson, Vice President, Dr. G. W. Pope, M. O. H., Mr. Wong Kwong-tin, Mr. M. K. Lo, Mr. F. C. Hall, Mr. L. C. F. Bellamy, Dr. Li Shu-fan, Mr. C. H. Baste, Mr. J. H. Gelling, secretary, and Mr. Ng Mui-kai, assistant secretary.

Mr. M. K. Lo asked—Will the Head of the Sanitary Department be kind enough to inform the Board:

Whether the Sanitary Department is or is not responsible for providing launches for conveying infectious or suspected infectious cases across the harbour, and if not, whether the Head of the Sanitary Department can find out from the proper Authorities which Department, if any, is so responsible?

The President—Paragraph 88 of the Public Health and Buildings Ordinance debar any infected person from entering any vessel other than such as may be specially provided for the purpose by this Board. In practice the Sanitary Department has in the past endeavoured to provide facilities for conveying infectious cases across the harbour but there has hitherto been no guaranteed service.

A Complaint.

Mr. M. K. Lo asked whether the Head of the Sanitary Department's attention had been called to the following complaint:

A local medical practitioner, at 8 a.m. on the 24th November 1932, ordered an ambulance from the Kowloon Fire Station to convey a case from No. 49 Hankow Road to the Victoria Hospital. As the case was then suspected to be one of diphtheria the Fire Station was requested to arrange for a launch to convey the patient to Hongkong, and for an ambulance to meet the launch on the Hongkong side. The ambulance did not arrive at the residence until 11.30 a.m., i.e. after the lapse of 3½ hours. On a complaint being made to the Fire Brigade the Honourable the Inspector General of Police stated that it was useless to send the ambulance at the time of the original call as there was no launch available to take the case across the harbour, and that this was the cause of the delay.

The President—Yes.

Matter Investigated.

Mr. Lo further queried if the Sanitary Department is responsible for the provision of launches, will the Head of the Sanitary Department investigate the matter mentioned and state the cause of the delay for providing the launch in question?

The President—The matter was investigated in November last year. The cause of delay was that the tug which is usually employed for conveyance of cases of infectious diseases across the harbour was out at sea towing refuse barges. In cases when urgency is mentioned a special launch is engaged; in the present instance the case was not presented as urgent and to keep down expenses it was considered better to await the return of the tug. It may be added that the Medical Officer of Health offers no objection to the cross-harbour transportation of infectious cases on private launches provided satisfactory arrangements are made in advance for prompt disinfection by the department after use. The cost of a special whole-time launch for conveyance of in-

THE FLOWER SHOW.

INNOVATION INTRODUCED THIS YEAR

The Hongkong Horticultural Society has issued its schedule for this year's Flower and Vegetable Show, and a full list of classes in which competitors may enter is given. The date for the holding of the show has been fixed as Thursday, March 2, and the venue will in all probability be the Volunteer Headquarters, as in past years. The weather so far has been kinder than some horticulturists can remember it, and it is hoped there will be a big entry of exhibits, and a fine display.

There is a special feature this year, an innovation so far as local shows are concerned, in the form of a competition for a vase or bowl of "ikebana", which is the Japanese art of placing flowers according to traditional artistic precepts. As most people know, the Japanese place great store by this art, and ladies of Nippon take a series of lessons from professors in the subject, and are awarded certificates of which they are justly proud. It is hoped that Japanese residents will enter for this competition, which is in the class of general exhibits, open to everyone.

At a recent committee meeting of the Horticultural Society, final arrangements were approved, and a strong and representative body of judges is being appointed.

Infectious diseases cases across the harbour has been provided in this year's Estimates and it is hoped that when this launch is ready all possible contingencies in the future will be adequately provided for.

REV. OWEN DROWNED

FEARS CONFIRMED IN SHANGHAI

COASTER SUNK IN STORM

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic
Message Ordinance, 1911. Received, January 18, 11.17 a.m.)

Shanghai, Jan. 18.
There now seems little doubt that the Rev. E. H. Owen, of the China Inland Mission, has been drowned, as feared.

The Shanghai headquarters of the China Inland Mission state that they have been able to confirm the report that the steamer upon which Mr. Owen embarked for Ningpo was the Chinese s.s. Hsinningtai, which as reported yesterday was lost in a storm.

The message received by the C.I.M. states that the Hsinningtai was wrecked on Friday of last week and that all aboard are believed to have been lost.

The ship foundered when she was within four hours of her destination.

Yesterday it was hoped that while Mr. Owen was four days overdue he had not embarked on the Hsinningtai, or the Yungchuan, which was also lost, but on another of the many small coastal steamers operating on the Chekiang coast and that the delay was due to the vessel having taken shelter. Mr.
Owen was between 26 and 27 years of age and first arrived in China in 1931.—Reuter.

PEKING MUSEUM TREASURES

NANKING REMOVAL PLAN PROTESTS

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic
Message Ordinance, 1911. Received, January 18, 12.11 p.m.)

Peking, Jan. 18.
To the outcry of numerous public bodies against Nanking's decision to remove some of the Palace Museum treasures has now been added the voice of the entire Federation of Labour Union in Peking, who have telegraphed a protest to Nanking.

At the present moment, about a third of the treasures have been packed and stored away against possible trouble, but so far none have been removed from Peking.—Reuter.

SECOND CHENG PETITION

TO COME BEFORE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL

Some thousands of signatures, it is said, have been secured for the second petition for the reprieve of Cheng Kwek-yau. Copies of the petition have been lying at various business premises for the past two days, and in addition to numerous Chinese there have been many European signatures appended.

The petition is, we learn, being handed to the Government this evening, and will come before the Executive Council at its meeting tomorrow morning.

WEATHER PROSPECTS.

A strong anticyclone is centred over N. E. China and S. W. Manchuria. An intense depression covers Hokkaido. Fresh monsoon will continue over the China Coast and the China Sea.

Local weather forecast:—Northerly winds, moderate to fresh; cloudy with rain and mist, improving slightly later.

LADY ABE BAILEY LOST

LONG OVERDUE ON FLIGHT

MOLLISON TO BEGIN SEARCH

London, Jan. 18.

Lady Abe Bailey's whereabouts are now giving rise to considerable anxiety.

She is considerably overdue and the cause for alarm is accentuated by the fact that Lady Bailey appeared, on her arrival at Oran, to be suffering from the symptoms of influenza.

Despite a rise in temperature and a general feeling of discomfort, Lady Bailey, in her anxiety not to be defeated in her project of beating the England-Cape flight record, took off from Oran the same day.

If no news is received of the flier within the next few hours,
Mr. J. A. Mollison announces that he will start immediately in search of her in a new De Havilland seven-seater air-liner.

He will be accompanied by Flight-Lieutenant W. L. Courtney and a mechanic.

They will fly direct to Oran and will commence their search from there.—Reuter.

AN AFTER-LUNCH COLLAPSE

AMES AND VERITY PUT ON 89

Adelaide, Jan. 19.

After a brilliant stand between Ames and Verity this morning, their partnership putting on 89 runs before lunch, England faded away this afternoon and were all out for 412 runs.

When England went into lunch with 385 on the board for six wickets, it seemed that the final score must be much larger, but the four remaining wickets went for 27 after lunch.

Despite this minor collapse, however, England are practically in an impregnable position, having established a lead of 531 runs, which means that Australia returns.

THE FOURTH INNINGS.

Australia are faced with an almost impossible task. The fourth wicket record for the Adelaide ground is 409 runs for 7 wickets, by Victoria against South Australia.

The record Test Match fourth innings, 411, went to England at Sydney in 1924-25, the next best, 370 was obtained by England at Adelaide in 1924-25.

Australia have never yet scored as many as 350 runs in the fourth innings of a Test Match. Their best effort was 336 at Adelaide in 1928-29.

The highest Test score on the Adelaide ground was made by Australia in 1920-21, when, in their second innings, the third of the match they compiled 582.

RAIN IN MORNING.

There were twenty thousand present when Ames (18) and Verity went out to resume England's innings. The weather was rather unsettled but the rain which had fallen in the early morning did not appear to have damaged the pitch.

Bradman completed his over and then Woodfull called upon his normal opening pair, Wall and O'Reilly. Scoring was slow at the start and 300 did not appear on the board until the innings had been in progress for 481 minutes.

GRIMMETT'S TEMPTERS.

Grimmett was tempting Verity with high pitched balls, but the Yorkshire bowler refused to indulge in reckless slogging, runs coming steadily, the partnership reaching their fifty runs after batting for 64 minutes.

Three hundred and fifty appeared on the board after 492 minutes and five runs after, Bradman was given the ball in place of Grimmett,
the first quarter of an hour.

THE GREAT WHITE WAY!—Heavy snowfalls are reported from the North of England and drifts 4 ft.

SILVER BOOST SOUGHT

NEW BILL BEFORE CONGRESS

REMONETISATION

Washington, Jan. 17.

A Bill aiming at the remone-tisation of silver has been introduced in the House of Representatives by Mr. Steagall, the chairman of the Banking Committee.

The Bill provides that the Secretary of the Treasury Department shall immediately purchase silver in the open market at current prices to the value of $250, 000,000 and that thereafter, each month, he shall purchase one-twelfth of the estimated annual production of silver/bullion in the United States, Alaska and the Philippines.

Payment for the silver, under the Bill, would take the form of silver certificates, which would be declared legal tender.—Reuter.

FORMER HEALTH OFFICER

DEATH OF DR. B. H. MELLON

News has been received in the Colony of the death of Dr. B. H.
Mellon, former Health Officer of the Port, which occurred on Friday last, at Palma, Majorca Island.

The late Dr. Mellon, who was born in 1888, was a son of Mr.
J. H. Mellon, of Greensland, Co.
Antrim. He entered the Hongkong Government service in 1921 as Second Health Officer, being promoted to the substantive post in 1923. During his residence here, he made many friends, who will learn with the utmost regret of his death. He leaves a widow and one child.

Dr. Mellon retired from the Government service at the end of 1931, being invalided out. He later went to Nice, in the south of France, and whilst there was admitted to hospital with a broken leg. Subsequently, he went to Majorca Island, and recent news showed that he had also been in hospital there. No news has been received of the cause of his death, however.

Bradman did not have the luck which came his way last night.
His arrival was the signal for both batmen to open out.

AMES HITS OUT.

Ames scored nicely with some beautiful drives through the covers, and sent up his 50 in 149 minutes by sending Bradman to the boundary.

Verity brought off some excellent leg shots and he had contributed 36 when the lunch interval was reached with the score enhanced by 89 runs during the morning and no wicket taken.

The lunch interval claimed its usual victims. Two wickets fell in the first quarter of an hour.

MISS PAGE'S LEG BROKEN

COMPANION HURT ABOUT HEAD

London, Jan. 17.

The two English girl fliers,
Miss Joan Page and Miss Audrey Sale Barker, who crashed in the African bush during a heavy storm on their way from the Cape to England, have now been brought safely to Nairobi.

They were located yesterday after an air search, having been missing since Saturday.

Miss Page had suffered a broken leg and her companion had slight head injuries.

Both are now in hospital and are reported to be comfortable and cheerful.

They state that they were blown out of their course by the storm and in making a forced landing when their petrol was exhausted, the machine turned over.—*British

FROBISHER'S NEW ROLE

TRAINING SHIP FOR CADETS

London, Jan. 17.

The cruiser Frobisher, 9,760 tons, left Chatham to-day for the West Indies as a new seagoing training ship for cadets of Dartmouth and public schools. There were 113 cadets on board.

During her three months' cruise,
she will visit the Azores, Trinidad, Grenada, Barbados, Saint Lucia, Antigua and Bermuda, returning to Chatham on April 7th.

The ship's company is reduced to the minimum necessary for supervision of the working of the ship, so that the young officers will be needed as working hands.
They will live and work as ordinary seamen.—British Wireless.

In our report of the Yaumati School prize-giving yesterday, the name of the Headmaster was inadvertently given as Mr. Misdell. It should, of course, have been the Rev.
G.E.B. Updell.

FLIGHT OVER EVEREST

ATTEMPT TO BE MADE IN MARCH

TWO MACHINES

London, Jan. 17.

Members of the Everest Flight Expedition, led by Air-Commander Fellowes, with Squadron Leader
Lord Clydesdale as chief pilot, leave for India early next month and the attempt to fly over the world's highest mountain will be made in March.

The main base will be at Pur-na, about 150 miles from Mt.
Everest.

The flight will be undertaken by two aeroplanes, each carrying a pilot and an observer. These will be equipped with oxygen, contained in cylinders, made of the special and extremely strong steel recently produced by Vickers Armstrong.

Westland aircraft, with Bristol Pegasus engines, have been chosen for the venture and all the flying members of the expedition have undergone tests in sealed chambers at the Royal Aircraft establishment, in which the air was rarified to an extent approximating to a height of 37,000 feet.

In that atmosphere thin paper falls to the ground without fluttering and the tick of a watch is unheard as there is insufficient air to carry the sound. All the members passed the test.

The cost of the expedition is being largely borne by Lady Houston.
—British Wireless.

DEATH OF MRS. H. FORSYTH

WELL-KNOWN WORKER FOR CHARITIES

Widespread regret has been occasioned by the death of Mrs.
Forsyth, wife of Mr. W. Forsyth, of Kowloon Docks, which occurred at the Matilda Hospital last night.

The deceased lady, who was extremely well-known as an old resident of the Colony, made a large circle of friends by her kindly disposition and genial nature. She was an indefatigable worker on behalf of the M.C.C. and other local charities, and from the inception of Kowloon Union Church had been a member of the Committee, also being a past President of the Women's Guild in connexion therewith. The
"At Home" which was to have been held by the Guild to-day has been indefinitely postponed in consequence of her death.

Much sympathy will be felt with the husband and family in their heavy bereavement. Amongst the children left are Mrs. David Pur-voss, Jr., of Shanghai, and Mr.
Forsyth, Jr., who is at present
in the Colony.

FREE STATE SWINGING

DEFEAT OF DE VALERA ANTICIPATED

COUNTRY FROSTBOUND

(Our Own Correspondent).

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic
Message Ordinance, 1911. Received, January
18, 10.38 a.m.)

London, Jan. 18.

Bitterly cold weather prevails in Ireland causing restrictions in the rival election campaigns and rendering the task of testing the feeling of the country doubly difficult.

Nevertheless, while the strength of Mr. de Valera's following in many parts of the Irish Free State are not under-estimated, there is a growing expectation in Dublin that Mr. Cosgrave will be returned.

It is probable that he will at once find himself up against difficulties. It seems fairly certain that if Mr. Cosgrave wins the election, his majority will be a very small one and that his government will have a precarious existence.

DUBLIN OPINION.

Opinion on the Dublin Stock Exchange is, however, definitely turning towards the prospect of a change of government and prices are rising in the country markets, which is generally interpreted as a sign of a widespread belief that the Anglo-Irish economic war will soon be brought to an end.

The Centre Party and the Independents, whose spokesmen is the Lord Mayor of Dublin, are determined to avoid another early election by the formation of a National Government.

TOO COLD FOR MEETINGS.

Meanwhile, the candidates are still struggling to overcome some of the difficulties offered in their campaigning by the weather. A large part of the country is frost-bound and as ninety per cent. of the meetings called are in the open air, the audiences dwindle away rapidly owing to the intense cold.

Even Mr. de Valera's own meetings have been affected in this way.

THE WORLD OF WOMENWOMEN IN BUSINESS.

By Edith Decoley

Woman's entry into business life has been revolutionary. The break-up of the old order of things, due to the war, gave woman her opportunity, and she grasped it eagerly. The effect can now be seen in her success in nearly every branch of commercial life.

This state of affairs is not a challenge to men, but rather a co-operative participation in the nation's work. It is really a return to primitive times when men and women worked side by side to retain their place in the early struggles of life.

The position is somewhat similar to-day, only modernised. The new world born of the late war calls for the intense co-operative effort of men and women to make good the claims, the aims, and the aspirations of the new civilisation.

To-day, every woman who has gained a place of power and service claims to have had some inspiration, outside her personal ambition that has helped her along the road to success.

"Woman and Labour" that wonderful, thought-provoking book by Olive Schreiner, and the much later work of Benjamin Kidd, "The Science of Power," have both been a great inspiration to me. No woman who reads "Woman and Labour" can be unaffected by the tremendous sincerity of its writer, nor remain unconscious of the future place of women in the work of the world.

These two books, showing how woman has finally triumphed after ages of struggle to gain recognition, must create confidence in anyone who wishes to take her place in modern business.

The position of the woman who has the goods and the gifts to offer is assured, in spite of the obstacles which still linger in her path. She is gradually turning these obstacles into opportunities.

Classic elegance is achieved by this handsome, fitted, long evening cloak done in black Lyons velvet in a mediaeval manner, with a modern touch in its white ermine cravat. It has elegance in its lines and fabric, and, in a very unusual manner, velvet buttons march up it in a very prim row from chin to floor. The sleeves have unusually large puffs above tight high cuffs.

The Successful Woman's Qualities

What particular qualities do successful business women display? I should say unhesitatingly all those qualities which are the possession of successful business men, together with a greater vision and a more highly-developed intuition. As a general rule, women in business are far less conservative than men and have a firm grasp of detail. Both these gifts are vital to modern business, when quick, unconventional decisions have to be given. Conservatism in business is the stifling attitude of "Let well alone; don't for goodness sake progress."

This does not mean that woman takes greater business risks, akin to gambling, but that she is more nimble-minded, more intuitive, and comes to a swift decision with easy confidence.

Highly successful business concerns to-day have women behind the scenes, filling executive positions, all of whom are displaying excellent business enterprise. Woman has shown herself equal to the task in positions involving control and authority. Her greater intuition, adaptability, and detailed human knowledge have been the gifts that have turned failure into success.

The argument that a woman is more emotional than a man in business dealings is equally fallacious. It is now recognised by those who have business dealings with women in positions of control that they are as business-like and as self-controlled as men. To gain this power woman has had to fight against great and unfair odds, and to-day she is not likely

Loyalty to her business sense would keep her consciously alert against undue emotion which would otherwise be admitting to a "certain business weakness."

Of course there is permissible emotion in a business discussion which is the outcome of sincerity. This emotional fever has often been the determining factor in clinching a business deal of importance. All classes in the business world, in spite of the cynics, are favourably impressed by sincerity.

The Home Sense

Does woman's entry into the business world interfere with her home sense? Not a bit. Girls and women who have had a sound business training and the experience of position are far better fitted to be the future mothers of a race requiring to be trained and nurtured from infancy in all arts of efficiency on account of the growing competition of the modern world. Every efficient mother means a better home, and a better chance for the future welfare of children, who make up the future race.

The business woman's home is not the soulless place depicted by her critics. It is efficient, with every regard to the saving of labour and the conservation of energy, thus giving greater scope for leisure, education, and healthy open-air activity. The Victorian homes bred fine men and women, but their women's work was never done.

The business housewife will not even require the kind of protection a trade union gives; she will use her efficiency and common sense to gain for herself and her family the hours of leisure necessary to good health and personal development.

GREAT NEW MYSTERY SERIAL

"WEEK-END MURDER"

BY GABRIEL F. FORBUSH

CHAPTER XXVII.

There was no mistaking Rosie's words. "An extra towel?" she said. "Certainly, sir, I'm sorry—"

"Just the bath." That was Pratt speaking. "I have plenty of the other kind."

Rosie's voice seemed to come from farther down the hall. Before the linen closet, probably.

"I must have slipped you, sir. I can't think how. You should have had enough. I always allow for the beach. Will this do you, sir?"

"More than enough. Thank you."

"That's that!" thought Tom, exchanging glances with his wife. "But it doesn't necessarily mean—"

—after all, he shares the bath with DeVos. Would he take it for granted he was short one, though, and ask Rosie for another if the missing one hadn't been his own? Rosie doesn't forget—and I'm sure Binks tells her to leave plenty."

"I do," agreed Linda when at the sound of the door closing they turned with one accord to each other. "But I'm a little low on towels just now and having all these extra people has cramped me a bit. But I told Rosie to let me know if she needed any more."

"Would she be apt to forget anyone?"

"Never! It's her regular routine. She wouldn't vary it."

"There's a double supply needed there."

"She'd remember."

"Then you think—?"

"I think I found that missing towel in Mr. Statlander's hamper. And I know it was the one that went round my neck."

"But wherever you found it, it was Pratt who asked for another."

"Mr. DeVos might have if he hadn't. All we know is that there was one short. And that Mr. Statlander had the smelly one in his possession."

"Of the two, I'd rather be the one who asked for another than the one who had it in his hamper. Binks, even if we have to ask him pointblank, we must learn where Statlander got it and why he hid it away."

"Marvin's gone back to his room. Tom, you were going to say something?"

He snapped his fingers in irritation. "Damn it! I wonder if I've lost my chance. I must get over to the garage, Linda. Did you see Shaughnessy?"

"No, he didn't come in with the other men. Haven't you seen him down here?"

"No, and I've been watching to be sure. I did see Rosie though, and she was going over there—very quietly and furtively, I

He motioned in the air. "Just the size of—"

"A folded shirt," said Linda. "Exactly. She simply flew up the stairs and down again because she came right out. That made me think he couldn't be there. He couldn't have resisted a little chat even if she was anxious to get back."

"Tom, you must see that shirt!"

"I'm going now. If he's there I'll simply make an excuse—remind him that dinner will be ready in 10 minutes."

"Better than that—ask him to stay, the way we have the others."

"Right! I will. But if he isn't—"

Going across the lawn Averill began hastily to form the sentences. Boyle, of course—later the others were playing the night. "No trouble at all to have you over here, old chap." Yes, that would be the line to take. But he most profoundly hoped there would be no call to take it.

About the garage brooded the silence of a deserted building. He called up from the bottom of the little flight of steps and took the precaution of knocking vigorously at the doorway which opened off the stairs at their head. Still silence—and he stepped into the larger of the two rooms, long, low, many-windowed, delightfully inviting, and, he was relieved to see, for the moment unattended.

By the door a broad, many-cushioned couch ran parallel to the wall, reaching almost to the first of the casement windows along the front of the room. On that couch where it might have been hastily dropped by anyone in a hurry to retreat lay a fat bundle, amorously wrapped, and folded into the cord which tied it was a piece of paper.

Tom still stood still, listening. Behind him, on the other side of the stairs, was the bedroom. He stepped quickly to that door, also open, and glanced into the smaller room, with windows on two sides through which the breeze from the water stirred the curtains in waving spirals. This too, was empty.

It was the work of a second to seize the folded paper from under the string and open it. The sheet, torn from a lined pad, was creased only once and the message was scribbled in pencil.

"The shirt is ruined entirely," he read. "I fixed the tear as best I could but the stains got worse not better. I hope—" the words ran closer here, at the bottom of the sheet, and Tom stopped to the window for a better light. Below he saw the road, the bit of lawn, and, beyond, the house door. Standing in it was Linda, chattering with forced gaiety, her eyes turned anxiously up to the garage windows—and just coming through the screen door was Shaughnessy.

What Rosie hoped Tom did not stop to discover. With one quick motion he was beside the bundle, tucking the note under the string, and he ran down the steps so quickly that he had time to slip from the little hall into the garage proper, so that he was emerging from its open double doors as the Irishman reached the building. Happily he tried to think if he had left any trace of his presence upstairs. He had not seen smoking, so there would be no ash on floor or window sill. No, he was safe. (Continued on Page 11.)

Tibore Sander found romance in Hungary. But his post was in Shanghai where he represented an electrical concern. By letters half way around the world he kept romance alive until he went to Budapest and married the recipient of his long distance courtship.

A war debt casualty is P. M. Herriot (right) who resigned from office after the Chamber of Deputies voted to default on their $19,281,432,500 indebtedness to the United States. Herriot is shown with M. Germain-Martin, his finance minister.

Old Man Winter was visiting Washington, and seemed to be doing his best when this striking picture was taken. Note how the white drifts had piled against the steps. The snow fell to a depth of more than a foot, and was Washington's heaviest in a decade.

50,000 HEROIN PILLS SEIZED

POLICE CONSTABLE ARRESTED

A huge seizure of heroin pills, followed by the arrest of a Shanghai constable, was made on board the s.s. Anhui on her arrival from Shanghai on January 6 last. The Chief Officer of the ship, on its arrival in port, noticed a coolie carrying a sack, being accompanied by the constable, who was stationed on board the ship as one of the anti-piracy guards. On the men being stopped and the sack opened, five small parcels were found. One of the packages was opened and discovered to contain pills, but except that they were bad, the No. 2 constable of the ship, was unable to inform the officer what they were.

The sack was kept by the officer and later the constable stated that the pills were the same as opium. The following day they were handed to the captain, who had not been on board the previous day. The master reported the matter to the agents who then notified the police.

The ship left for Canton and on its return the guard was detained and charged. This morning he was brought before Mr. Schofield at the Central Police Court and charged with being in possession of 50,000 heroin pills.

Mr. F. E. C. Rendall appeared for the defendant and Mr. W. L. Bart Sparrow for the prosecution. After outlining the facts of the case, Mr. Sparrow said that in the defendant's favour was the fact that the day after the pills were seized by the officer, the constable reported for duty and drew his pay as usual.

The No. 2 constable would give evidence that during a conversation he had with the defendant subsequent to the seizure the constable asked the constable to get the pills back from the officer and to offer him some money if necessary. The case was adjourned until to-morrow morning.

Defendant pleaded guilty on all counts and elected to make no statement.

His Lordship sentenced accused to two years' hard labour in respect of the breach of the deportation order, 18 months' hard labour for the burglary and larceny, and 12 months' hard labour on the larceny count, the sentence on the deportation order to run concurrently with the other two sentences.

RUSSIA, CHINA AND JAPAN

Issues of extreme importance are wrapped up in the exchange of Notes which has been taking place between Russia and Japan for the conclusion of a Non-Aggression Pact. They are those, in particular, which involve the future status of Manchukuo. The Japanese Government apparently thinks that the better way of preventing any border clashes with the Soviet is to devise some method of preventive regulation. Why there should be any reluctance to conclude a Non-Aggression Pact, unless there is real fear of future trouble, is puzzling. The impression gained is that Japan is somewhat suspicious of Russia. Indeed, suspicion would seem also to exist in Russia as well, since M. Stalin quite recently advocated the diverting of some of the Soviet's industrial energies to the manufacture of arms and ammunition, in view of the fact that some of Russia's neighbours (Japan obviously included) have not signed Non-Aggression Pacts. Be that as it may, for the purpose of preventing frontier incidents, Japan has suggested the formation of a Japan-Soviet-Manchukuo Committee, and the proposal is apparently acceptable to Russia. This is where the deliberations take on a serious turn, inasmuch as the creation of any such body would imply the recognition of Manchukuo by the Soviet. Very possibly this is precisely Japan's wish. But Russia, which has complained of the League treatment of the Manchurian problem, must know full well that by recognising Manchukuo she would only be further complicating the situation. Such a step would be all the more regrettable at a moment when an invitation to the Soviet to be represented on the proposed Conciliation Committee in the Sino-Japan dispute is contemplated. There is, moreover, a further point of decided importance, namely, the effect which recognition of Manchukuo would have on the relations between Russia and China. These two nations have only just resumed diplomatic contact, and in view of China's well-known attitude towards the creation of Manchukuo, Nanking obviously would be deeply offended were Russia to fall in with the Japanese plan for recognition of the new State. The whole situation as between Russia, China and Japan is at the moment very delicately poised, for which reason any change in the relations of any of the three nations one towards another needs to be very carefully watched. At any rate, Russian recognition of Manchukuo would almost inevitably lead to developments of the utmost seriousness.

Mostly About "Most"

Beware of superlatives. They are the pirates of the English language. They take to themselves things that do not belong to them. And so the person who has the temerity to assert that this is the biggest or best, the longest or loveliest, the sweetest or sourest thing in the world, should pause to approximate the effect of his statement. Recently a lexicographer named "the ten most beautiful words in the English language." And what a spanking he has been getting ever since! Here are the words: dawn, hush, lullaby, murmuring, tranquil, mist, luminous, chimes, golden, memory. It was the word "most," the malicious little bandit, the superlative, that did all the damage. The mere assertion that they are "beautiful words" would arouse little militant comment. It was the little word "most," unfurling its banner of defiance between the "ten" and the "beautiful," that made the statement the target of a broadside from the world's "best" orthographers. Driven tandem, this string of words may present a rather attractive appearance, but they may be easily associated with other words in the presentation of anything but a "most beautiful" picture. After all, there are many beautiful words, and their associations largely make them so. Even "cabbage" is, to some people, a beautiful word when it is associated with a couple of slices of lean, tender corned beef.

How the Poor Live

How often has it been proved in the social history of our time that more knowledge is the first indispensable step to improvement! Forty years ago there was no lack of good will toward the poor and desire to improve their lot; but sentiment was defeated by sheer ignorance of the conditions under which the poor lived. A pioneer step in the warfare against poverty in modern cities was taken when Charles Booth organized his house-to-house and street-by-street investigation in London, and published his survey of the "Life and Labour of the People." What a picture it revealed of poverty and deprivation in the poorer quarters—the "East End"—of London! Nearly one-third of the population of this huge area was living below the "poverty line," amid misery caused in the main not by unemployment but by brutal sweating. The forty years which have intervened have seen a change in that. A similar inquiry in the same area has been made in recent years under the direction of Sir H. Llewellyn Smith, and some of the most important results have just been published in the third and fourth volumes of the "New Survey of London Life and Labour." Most of the materials were accumulated in the year 1929—that is to say, before the present world slump in trade had produced its dire results in doubling and in some districts trebling or quadrupling the already large numbers of persons unemployed in England. The efforts of those forty years were not in vain. Of the population of this poor region—nearly 2,500,000—no less than three-quarters of a million would be living under the "poverty line" if the conditions were still the same as in Booth's time. Actually, in 1929 the number was about one-quarter of a million. Those "under the poverty line" are persons subject to conditions of privation which, if long continued, would deny them all but the bare necessities. It is indeed rightly recorded as a "grim" fact that there should still have been one-tenth of the population living under these conditions. But the reduction of the number is striking evidence of improvement. It is also a fact well worth noting that the amount of deprivation due to "sweating"—which accounted for most of the poverty a generation ago—was in 1929 almost negligible; wherever it occurs to-day it is generally due, not to offending employers, but to lack of employment. Even this hardship is modified, as it was not then, by old-age and other pensions, and by unemployment insurance. The poverty which the new surveyors discover in East London is due to inability to find jobs; and it is established by this inquiry that most of the unemployed "genuinely wish to obtain work."

HAS YOUTH MISSED ITS CHANCE?

By ROBERT BERNAYS, M.P.

The loudest cry in the post-war world has been that youth has not been given its chance. It cannot be said of the present British Parliament.

The dominant impression that any visitor to the House of Commons retains to-day is of hordes of young men, earnest, well groomed, and all looking exactly alike.

There are more men under 35 in the present Parliament than in any within the memory of man. Youth has certainly had its chance in politics. What is interesting to study is whether it is taking it. A year has gone by since the national tide swept us back to Westminster a little bewildered at the extent of our victories. Most maiden speeches are over now. The bunch at the first hurdle has thinned out and it is possible to see who are likely to forge ahead. It is strange how scanty is the field.

Dumb Dogs of the Past

Admittedly it is an unprofitable business trying to spot future Prime Ministers. They spring from the circumstances of the time far more than from their speeches in the past. Who would have imagined that Campbell-Bannerman would have led the Liberal Party to the greatest victory in its history or that the by-election victor of Bewdley in 1908, who was almost completely silent through the most exciting six years of our Parliamentary history, was to be twenty years later the triumphant leader of post-war Toryism?

At the same time it is a little disturbing to-day that there is not a single young man whose rising to speak when it is reported in the smoking rooms arouses, except among his friends, a flicker of interest.

Not "Good Form"

One reason is that we are as yet too timid. We are cursed with the public school code of obedience to our betters. Are there not over a hundred Etonians in the House and nearly half as many Harrovians? I remember being sharply pulled up some months ago by a senior member for some criticisms I had seen fit to make of a Cabinet Minister. "Who are you to attack?" I was indignantly asked, "You have not been here six months yet." It was said in exactly the tone of voice with which small boys venture to speak in their School Debating Society are reminded that they have not even won their House Rugger colours yet.

But that kind of mentality, amusing though it is, has had a bad effect on the vitality of this Parliament. We are all much too inclined to apologise for ourselves. Question time has become largely the affair of the old men. Most of us would as soon wear brown boots with a blue suit as indulge in a little healthy heckling of the Government Front Bench.

Trained Gladiators

Indeed, we seem hardly to dare to put down questions at all. It is quite an event when question time extends its full allotted hour. If there is a revolt against a Government Bill, such as the London Traffic Bill, it is never the young men who take the lead. The adjournment motion every night provides obvious opportunities for members to raise legitimate grievances. I have not once heard a young member take advantage of it.

Yet for the cut and thrust of Parliamentary debate we ought to be admirably equipped. None of us has any excuse for the inferiority complex which makes the change from the sweeping orations of the street corner to the subtle debating points of the House in Committee such a terrible ordeal to many now Labour members. Many of us have already crossed swords with one another in university debating societies. There are no fewer than 13 ex-presidents of the Oxford Union in the present House of Commons.

What They Have Missed

Many excuses can be made for us. A large proportion of us, in addition to our Parliamentary work, have to earn our own living. This means that we cannot give the minute attention to points of procedure and the intricate details of a Parliamentary Bill which alone can make the complete Parliamentary swordsman. Moreover, the great questions of the day—debts, currency problems, disarmament—unlike the old dividing questions of Home Rule or the House of Lords, or land taxes, are necessarily fought out at international conventions rather than on the floor of the House of Commons.

All the same, even on the questions of the hour that remain our concern, there is lamentably little evidence of independence of thought. Perhaps the conditions of the last election are to blame. So many members were spared this gruelling apprenticeship to public life that prolonged prospective candidatures in hopeless seat provide. We tend to adopt in toto the party view on all questions because we have not had the experience to enable us to form any other.

Where there is independence of thought there is the greatest reluctance to break from the pack. Rebel views do not extend beyond the lobbies. Inside the Chamber all is uniformity and good form. I could count on the fingers of one hand the number of young men who say the same thing inside the Chamber as they say out of it.

All the pressure that has been exerted on this Government has been from the older men in the direction of making it Conservative. There has been little or no penitentiary pressure on the opposite to keep it National.

What is needed is another Fourth Party. Lord Randolph Churchill was only 31 when he sprang into fame as the leader of the group that changed the face of English politics for a generation.

But there is plenty of time.

We young men in our first year may have created an impression of disappointment. There are at least three more years left to correct it.

The Very Idea!

FORWARD THE LOTOL!

By Eddie B. Kelly, Apianist.

According to a Canadian report, a shipment of 6,880,000 bees, from Taber, Alberta, left Vancouver on November 19 for Canton.

Some trouble has been experienced at Canton since the bees were delivered, as a hasty count has revealed that only 5,679,997 were landed.

The Anzac Company has been commissioned to investigate the matter, with a view to discovering the missing bees.

Japanese reinforcements are being rushed to Canton, and the situation has increased in intensity following the action of the Japanese authorities in presenting a demand to the Chinese Government for the immediate retirement of this new force.

A protest has been lodged with the League of Nations, which will meet next month to consider the new development, and a commission, under Lord Bee-verbroke, has been authorised to make a report.

The Japanese threaten to spray Canton with Lotol if their representations are ignored.

We will now draw to a close by merely saying that what the devil people can see in this rubbish about bees, Mr. Edward Kelly, the well-known author, journalist, man about town, and member of the Hongkong and Shanghai Clubs, with crossed rules on a field argent or, with roaring lions, and unicorns with horns reversed. FIGHTING STOPPED

BOTH SIDES MAKING PREPARATIONS

NINTH ARMY MEN ON SPOT

Peking, Jan. 18. Heavy snow falls interrupted fighting between the Chinese and Japanese near Chienmenkow and Shih Ho, while only occasional skirmishes are reported from Shihmenchia.

Seven trains of Japanese and Korean troops arrived in Mukden yesterday morning and it is understood they will be dispatched to the Fengtien-Jehol frontier when necessary.

Japanese troops were seen drilling at Shihmenchia and putting up more defence works yesterday, despite the heavy snow.

HO CHU-KUO PROMOTED.

Marshal Chang Hsueh-ling has announced the promotion of General Ho Chu-kuo for his meritorious services to the post of Commander of the Third North-eastern Army, concurrently with his command of the Ninth Brigade.

Ho Chu-kuo has been given full power to defend Shihmenchia and districts along the railway which are still held by the Chinese.

Foreign sources report the quiet arrival in Chienwangtao of twenty officers of the Nineteenth Route Army, who participated in the Sino-Japanese war at Shanghai. Their arrival is considered important.

JAPANESE SUSPICIOUS

The situation is still very tense but the Japanese appear to be acting strictly on the defensive, their air reconnaissance and occasional sorties being carried out to prevent a surprise attack from the Chinese, of which they appear suspicious.

FILM STORAGE SUMMONSES

MAGISTRATE TAKES SERIOUS VIEW

Action by the fire authorities led to two summonses before Mr. Schofield, at the Central Police Court to-day, against the United Photophony Service, Limited, Lock Hing Building, 33, Queen's Road Central, for carrying on the business of film storing and film repairing at the address without notifying the Inspector-General of Police and for storage of 46 reels in a place not previously approved.

Fines totalling $500 were imposed.

The Superintendent of the Fire Brigade, Mr. J.C. Fitz-Henry, said that with Mr. G. Saunders, Station Officer, he visited the premises on the 6th of this month, and was informed by the Manager, Mr. S.Y. Lam, that no film was kept on the premises.

As witness went into one of the rooms, certain people who had gone in ahead of him were seen making a quick exit into the corridor, carrying an apparatus with loose film trailing behind them. They were stopped by Mr. Saunders. They were attempting to escape down a wooden staircase, in the rear of the building, but, unfortunately for them, were stopped by the staircase being blocked with odds and ends, and had to return.

The very fact of their attempting to get away with the apparatus and film, said Mr. Fitz-Henry, implied that they knew fully well what they were doing. The films were kept in a room with wooden partitions, and in a building internally wholly constructed with wood. Had a fire occurred, other people would have found themselves in an unfortunate position if they had sought escape down the wooden staircase which was obstructed.

MOTORBOAT SUNK IN HARBOUR

COLLIDES WITH A LAUNCH

A motorboat, the Man Lik, was sunk late last night as a result of a collision with the steam launch Hop On.

The accident occurred off Stonecutters' Island at 8.30 p.m. The motorboat sank within ten minutes of the collision. The crew were rescued by the launch. Chan Mak-siu, aged 17, was later removed to the Kowloon Hospital suffering from injuries to his knees, suffered as a result of the collision.

A new issue of the "Hongkong Naturalist" has come to hand, and embodies a great deal of informative material of the high standard which one has come to associate with this journal. The issue is a combination of Nos. 3 and 4 of Volume III, and closes the third annual volume. Outstanding articles among the contents are those dealing with local orchids and flowering shrubs, by Dr. G. A. C. Herklots; the archaeology of Lamma Island as revealed in scraps of ancient pottery, ably dealt with by Father D. J. Finn; and local mosquitoes, discussed by Dr. R. B. Jackson. All these, particularly the flower series, are illustrated, with both drawings and photographs of a splendid quality.

A topical article is contributed also by Dr. McClure, of Kwangtung, on the Chinese narcissus which is such a feature of China New Year, and is already to be seen on sale in the streets of Hongkong.

Other articles deal with spiders, fishes, and birds' eggs, and it is altogether a fine issue and a credit to its contributors.

WHEN HONESTY DOES NOT PAY

WOMAN FINED IN MUITSU CASE

An 11-year-old mui-tai was stated at the Central Police Court this morning to be part of a dowry which Ng Wai-lan, a woman from up-country, received on her marriage.

The girl was recently brought into the Colony, and two days afterwards was taken by her mistress, with a view to registration, to the Secretariat of Chinese Affairs. She was there told that she was contravening a regulation by bringing an unregistered mui-tai into the Colony.

A lenient view was taken of her case, in view of the straight-forward way in which she acted, and when the charge came before the Police Magistrate to-day, only a technical penalty was asked for by Inspector Fraser.

Mr. Schofield accordingly imposed a fine of $10.

INFRINGEMENT OF TRADE MARKS

FORGED LABELS ON WOOL

Representing Messrs. Patons and Baldwins, Mr. H. J. Armstrong appeared at the Kowloon Magistrate's Court before Mr. Butters this morning to prosecute the manager of the Kak Lan Company, of 182 Shanghai Street, who was summoned for infringing the trade marks of complainant firm.

The first summons related to the "B. B." and "Lighthouse" marks, and the second to the "Beehive" mark.

It was alleged by Mr. Armstrong that on three hanks of wool bought recently from defendant's shop in Shanghai Street, the mark of Patons and Baldwins was affixed. When one was opened, another mark, "Steger & Co." was found inside. The Patons and Baldwins mark was undoubtedly genuine, the only explanation being that it was taken from a bona fide hank and fixed to the false one.

Mr. A. J. White, of Messrs. Jardine, Matheson & Co., said he instructed a salesman to buy some "Lighthouse" wool on January 6 as he wanted to send it to North China as sample. This salesman returned with three hanks, bearing the Patons and Baldwins mark. One of them, when he opened it, bore the ticket of Steger & Co., but the other two bore only the "Lighthouse" mark.

Mr. W. A. Kaerton, Far Eastern representative of Messrs. Patons and Baldwins, said his firm had a large business in wool in Hongkong. Both the "B. B." and "Lighthouse" brands were very popular here. Witness testified that the hank of wool in which the mark of Steger & Co. was found was definitely not the wool of his company. The texture, he said, was different.

With regard to the second summons relating to the "Beehive" mark, witness stated that he accompanied Sergeant Hunter when a search was made of defendant's premises, and there they found a considerable quantity of wool purporting to be "Beehive". There was also a quantity bearing forged "B. B." marks.

Some of the tickets were obviously forgeries, but some were very well done and almost impossible for the public to detect. The summonses were adjourned till Monday afternoon.

On the application of Mr. Armstrong, his Worship issued a warrant for the seizure of the wool on defendant's premises.

THREE YEARS FOR ROBBERY

TRIAL ENDS AT THE SESSIONS

At the Criminal Sessions, before the Police Judge (Mr. Justice Wood) this morning, Chau Chik-Kit, pleaded "Not Guilty" to a charge of robbery by two or more at Sai Tau village, Kowloon City, on December 4th, and stealing a watch, a pair of trousers, an electric torch and $5.00, the property of Lam Yung-kan, and two suits of clothing, a pair of ear-rings, a gold ring and $3.20 in money, the property of Leung Kun-yung. The jury comprised Messrs. T. R. Parsons (foreman), P. D'Alcantara Xavier, J. M. Hrawin, F. R. Ribeiro, G. E. R. Divett, Woo Ting-chang and E. E. Osmund.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, assistant attorney general, appearing for the Crown, said the village was walled, and the house at which the robbery took place was a one-storey Chinese dwelling at the end of a row of houses situated outside the village. On the day in question, the occupants of the house were the complainant, Lam Yung-kan, his wife and his invalid mother. At about 6.30 in the evening, the three people were in the sitting room prior to taking their evening meal when three men of which the accused was one entered. One of the men said he was a policeman and was to search the house for contraband. He took some wire from his pocket and bound up the man Lam, and his wife and made them lie on the bed.

COVERED WITH BLANKET.

A blanket was thrown over them and a cotton quilt over the invalid mother. Accused then sat on the bed between the man and his wife with his hands on them. The other two men went into the bedroom adjoining. Complainant's wife asked accused to lift the blanket a little, or they would be suffocated. Accused lifted the blanket and they were able to see what happened. One of the men then came from the bedroom and asked complainant's wife for her keys. She said they were in a chest-of-drawers and when he brought them she showed him which key fitted each lock.

The men were in the bedroom for about half-an-hour and in the meantime accused, who had become impatient shouted to them asking if they had finished. There was no reply. The two men, having searched the bedroom, left the house. Accused told the bound people not to get up yet, and walked out of the house by the east gate.

Walking towards the gate was a friend of the complainant. The complainant was in the process of loosening his hands and shouted "Robbery, robbers". The friend then ran after the accused and caught him. Complainant had by this time shaken off the wire with which his wrists were bound and also helped in holding the accused, who was taken to a near-by police station by an Indian policeman. The house was then examined and the articles mentioned above were found to be missing.

Accused's defence, said Mr. Fraser, was that he was not connected with the affair and knew nothing about it, but no difficulty was experienced in identifying the prisoner at the Police Station. Evidence for the Crown was given by Lam Yung-kan, Leung Kun-yung, Luk Kan, the friend who made the arrest, Sub-Inspector Smith, and four police constables.

THE DEFENCE.

Mr. Fraser stated that in the Police Court accused made the following statement:—"I know nothing about this. I don't know what to say. I know nothing. Release me. I am innocent. I have been falsely accused. Let me go; let me go. No stolen goods were found on me, so how can I be connected with robbery? There was no time for me to get rid of the property as I was arrested on the spot."

Accused said he went to the village to find a friend and as he was passing along the street he was set on by a number of people. He was not a robber and there was no proof. He did not go to the house.

His Lordship then summed up, and the jury returned a verdict of "Guilty".

Prisoner was sentenced to three years' hard labour.

INTERPORT TRIAL & TRIBULATION

HAMMOND—
Who fell a victim to—

MR. JAMES RESIGNS
OF L.T.A.

Departure To-day on Home Leave

(By "Veritas").

MR. C. P. F. James, for nearly three years Hon. Secretary of the Hongkong Lawn Tennis Association has resigned his position coincident with home leave.

Mr. James, who has filled the difficult role during the most important phase in the history of the Association, departed for San Francisco on the President Wilson this morning. He returns five months hence, but has already intimated that he will not be prepared again to take up the reins of office.

VALUED OFFICER.

In him, the Association has lost a very valued officer. Taking over from Mr. D. S. Green at a time when the Association was a mere name and enjoying direct interest only in the organisation of the tennis league, Mr. James assisted in no small measure in its resuscitation and reorganisation.

His work behind the scenes has been unobtrusive but of immeasurable value to tennis in this Colony.

Together with Mr. D. S. Green he was responsible for the excellent organisation of the Helen Willis Moody exhibition in 1931, and also played a leading part in the arrangements in connexion with the Interport last year.

He threw his heart and soul into the task of trying to find a "home" for the L.T.A., where it might stage all championship, Interport and exhibition tennis in the Colony, and after securing a site on the Marina, Kowloon, saw the scheme fall through owing to lack of support by the members of the Association.

BRINGING BACK TROPHY.

Mr. James's interest in local tennis, however, is as strong as ever, and yesterday he told me that he intended to see Mrs. Willis Moody whilst in San Francisco and endeavour to make further progress in securing a cup in her name for local competition.

It will be remembered that when playing here, Mrs. Willis Moody expressed a desire that such a trophy should exist in Hongkong, and it is fairly safe to assume that this will materialise before the year is out.

Mrs. James, who is one of the most prominent of the Hongkong lady tennis players, and who played against Shanghai in 1929 and 1931, and was runner up in last

SELECTORS WITNESS ANOTHER FIASCO

"A TEAM ENVELOPED IN A CLOUD OF LETHARGY"

COMMITTEE'S PECULIAR EFFORT TO SOLVE LEFT WING PROBLEM

(By "Veritas").

"SHANGHAI will have to be a mighty poor crowd of footballers if they can't beat a team like this" summed up a spectator after yesterday's Interport trial, and after watching the pitiful display I am inclined to agree with the disconsolate observation.

So feeble was the effort yesterday by both teams—Triallists and the Borderers—to serve up football even of a mediocre calibre, that one begins to wonder whether these trial matches are being taken seriously or not. If the idea of trials is to assist the selectors in their task of picking a team according to form, then after yesterday's fiasco they have all my sympathies.

If, on the other hand, such games are merely the means of giving the players a leg-stretch, then one is wasting one's time taking them at all seriously.

Frankly, the game was so boring, that if one had left at half time one would not have missed a single incident, whilst the standard of play could not stand as being complimentary to that of the Third Division.

JOHNSTON FUTILE.

Johnston's leadership of the forward line was futile, and I am puzzled as to whether the selectors really considered him if they did, then yesterday must have disillusioned them. If they didn't, then why play him at all? Introducing Johnston at centre forward meant that A. V. Gosano had to play out of position at inside right, with the result that the whole vanguard was disorganised.

If anything, E. Strange, brought in as reserve, was the brightest of the attackers, but he destroyed all his good ideas by selfishness.

He must remember that there are four other forwards, who, five times out of six, are better placed for the ball than himself. The tragedy of the whole thing is that when he likes, he can hand out some magnificent passes. Unfortunately, he doesn't "like" enough.

"SO-SO" HALF BACKS.

The Gosano brothers combination on the right was fair, but not up to Interport standard, and although Santos is a clever little footballer, I am afraid he is not big enough or heavy enough to carry him past the Shanghai defence.

The half backs were just "so-so." Willing and effective in their tackling, they showed little desire to add constructiveness to their display. Leung Wing-chui was the pick, but Duncan certainly did not show better form than Bliss, and if the choice is to rest between the two for the left half position, then a toss of the coin is all that is required.

S. Strange was absent from the defence, but there was nothing amiss with this department, Allen and Blackburn adequately covering Rodger, who had very little to do.

Of course the poor opposition provided by the Borderers might have been in part responsible for the inglorious work of the prospective Interporters, although this cannot seriously be advanced as an excuse.

It seemed that a blanket of lethargy and disinterestedness just descended and enveloped the Trial team. Anyhow, the result was painful.

SHINING LIGHTS.

The Borderers' shining lights could be counted on one hand and there would still be some fingers left over!

Podmore dominated everybody, but it was football of a purely defensive nature and contributed little or nothing towards goals. Morrison was another who enjoyed the limelight.

Up forward the 24th were as weak as their opponents. Harris occasionally looked dangerous, but never got beyond that stage. Jones added and fuddled and forgot the elementary rule that goals are invariably obtained from shooting, whereas Duncan, his partner sent across three good centres.

Altogether a distressing match. It should, perhaps, be added that the Trial team won by the only goal scored. A. V. Gosano notched it in the first half, neatly snap-

More Experiments Podmore A Trial Forward

There is something like a gesture of despair in the latest move of the Interport selection committee. For the next trial, which takes place on Saturday, they have introduced a new left wing in the persons of Podmore and Chris Pile.

Why such an exceptionally clever half back like Podmore should be brought into the forward line, when the left half position is at present anything but satisfactory requires closer and more complex reasoning than I can give.

Podmore will probably put up a good display on Saturday, for he is a sufficiently experienced and clever enough footballer to do himself credit in whatever position he is placed.

ARE SELECTORS SERIOUS?

But, again I would ask: Are the selectors seriously contemplating his final inclusion as inside left? If not, why waste their own time and the intended value of the trial by playing him there?

If Podmore is likely to be included in the Interport team, surely he should be tried out at left half? This is one department which can well be strengthened, and Podmore is the man for the job.

Chris Pile is worthy of a trial, although I do not hesitate in opinion.

FOOTBALLING BROTHERS.

A. V. and B. Gosano, who appear certain to play together in the forthcoming football Interport.

ling that the selectors have overlooked a more obvious choice in Seal of the Artillery. He may not be quite so clever and so well endowed with tricks as Pile, or Santos, or even Baldry, but he has founded his game on the principle of getting the ball into the goal mouth in the quickest time possible and in the most effective way at his command. This is the primary job of a winger, and at the present time Seal can do it better than any other outside left in the Colony.

STRANGE WILL BE FIT.

The most welcome thing the selectors have done is to bring back A. V. Gosano to centre forward. His happiest moments at football are spent here, for he is an ideal leader. Perhaps, too, B. Gosano will enjoy himself more at inside right, although I think he will have to show some improvement to hold his place.

S. Strange yesterday informed me that his foot is making excellent recovery and he is assured of being O. K. for the Interport. In that case there need be no further worry about the defence.

The opposition for the trial team on Saturday will be a Chinese eleven selected by the H.K.O.A.A.F., and it is certain that the potential Interporters will have to go give of their utmost to win.

THE TEAM.

The trial eleven will be composed of:
Rodger:
Allen and Lau Mau:
Leung Wing-chui, Pardee and A. Duncan:
Tang Kwok-nang, B. Gosano, A. V. Gosano, Podmore and C. Pile.
Reserves—Martin, Bliss, Ridley and Beltrao.

PUTS ENGLAND IN WINNING POSITION

AUSTRALIA'S BIG TASK

Adelaide, Jan. 17.

Ironmonger and Wall were entrusted with the ball after tea. The batsmen added 50 in 70 minutes and both then opened out to the bowling. They gave a great display of driving and after being at the wickets for 149 minutes Hammond reached his 50, which included four fours. Leyland mis-hit a ball from Ironmonger and skied it to mid-on where Wall took the catch, to dismiss the batsman with the score standing at 245 for five wickets. Leyland had made 43 in 108 minutes and played an aggressive innings.

With the score at 298 Bradman relieved O'Reilly and took the last over of the day but the first ball he sent down Hammond played on after having scored 85. Ames had 18, the closing scores being 298 for six. Hammond was powerful in his back play and clever in his placing. A feature of his innings was his characteristic driving past cover. He was at the wickets for 221 minutes during which time he collected eight boundaries. Ames played a decent innings and had been in for 59 minutes before play closed. He has scored two fours.

The scores are appended:

R.A.M.C. WIN A FAST HOCKEY MATCH

At Sookumpoo yesterday the R.A.M.C. defeated the 12th Battery in the Marnak tournament by the only goal scored.

Play was fast and although the Battery had the better of the exchanges they were unable to score. The Corps' keeper played a fine game, saving many difficult shots. No score was registered at the interval. On the change-over, the Battery continued to press, but the shooting of the excellent defence of the Medicals prevented them from scoring. Eventually the Corps, who greatly improved their combination, took the lead through Turney.

In a friendly game at King's Park, yesterday, the Y.M.C.A. played a draw with the Royal Corps of Signals. The Corps opened the scoring soon after the initial bully, but before the interval the "Y" equalised through Brown. There was no scoring during the second half.

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

For gripping drama and tension, few pictures come out of Hollywood can equal "Skyscraper Souls," the latest product of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is showing from tomorrow at the Queen's Theatre. The world's tallest building—a 102-story New York skyscraper—is the locale of this novel and absorbing drama. Through the eye of the camera are shown incidents and problems, the joys, the struggles and the despairs of the occupants of this building. As a result, one of the most engrossing pictures of the year has been produced. Sparkling performances by Verree Teasdale, New York stage actress appearing in her first film, and Jean Hersholt. Just as in "Grand Hotel," Hersholt makes one of the lesser roles of the play stand out in bold relief. And then there is the skyscraper itself. Always it looms forth as an important figure in the drama. Fortunes are fought for, love is won and lost, human lives are sacrificed, hopes glenn and fade and are kindled again, human beings laugh and cry. And over the lives of all, this building spreads its shadow. In their mad pursuit of love and lucre, the thousands of workers in the skyscraper are many prisoners in the steel cells they call their offices. The story involves a financial magnate's attempt to use those around him as pawns in his scheme to gain ownership of the world's greatest skyscraper. There is the woman who through love, has given her life to help him succeed. There is the little stenographer whom he lures from the boy who wants to marry her. There is, too, the radio announcer in the tower of the building who tries by stealing money to hold the woman who is his whole life and loses both woman and life. All through the drama run the currents of other lives—lives suddenly together to common ruin through the colossal treachery of the building owner. Others in the cast who perform notably are Gregory Ratoff, Anita Page, Norman Foster, George Barbier, Wallace Ford, Hedda Hopper. Edgar Selwyn, as director, has achieved the unusual in handling the action of the story, all of which takes place in a great New York skyscraper.

Brilliant Acting In "The Guardsman". Cleverness in acting, direction, play construction and lines are noticeable features of "The Guardsman," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer comedy now showing at the Queen's Theatre. The situation of the story, by Ferenc Molnar, the highly sophisticated Hungarian dramatist, puts an immediate strain on its principals. It concerns an actor who is insanely jealous of his wife, and makes love to her in disguise, in order to test her loyalty to him. The play was an enormous success on the stage, and it has been brought to equally successful cinema fruition by the same stars, Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne. Lunt is the amorous, deep-voiced Russian magnificent both as the actor, and Cosack, and as the wife with the enigmatic eyes, Lynn Fontanne runs him a close race for first honours.

Next in point of performance is Roland Young, who is splendid as the Celie, a highly amused innocent bystander. Zasu Pitta is laughable as usual, in the role of comedy maid. Maudie Eburne, stage actress of high repute, makes a very comical theatrical mamma. Sidney Franklin is to be commended for the smooth nature of his direction. He has faithfully transplanted to the screen all the original sophisticated charm of Molnar's play, as translated into screen form by Ernest Vajda and Claudine West. An interesting feature of the production is a "play within a play." To establish Lunt and Fontanne in the story as a successful pair of theatrical players, a single incident of Maxwell Anderson's "Elizabeth, the Queen" is presented on the theatre's stage. "Elizabeth, the Queen" is the success of the current season in which Lunt and Fontanne have appeared all over the country. In this play within a play Lynn Fontanne portrays Queen Elizabeth and Alfred Lunt his role of Essex.

"The Phantom President" "The best way to get on the stage to-day is to throw on your hat and walk on after it." There's more truth than humour in that statement, according to George M. Cohan, author, actor and producer, who makes it. For it is entirely without optimism that Cohan, who has his talking-picture debut with Claudette Colbert in "The Phantom President," showing at the King's Theatre surveys the prospect of young people breaking on to the stage at the present. Cohan, who has been a dominant figure in the American theatre for more than a quarter-century, plays two roles in his first talkie. He is first a candidate for President who lacks the personality to win votes, and second a medicine-show man brimming with personality who is hired to impersonate the former. The result is highly hilarious.

"Sob Sister" One day a plainly dressed woman collapsed in Market Street, San Francisco. A crowd gathered, an ambulance was called and she was taken to the City Receiving Hospital in the Hall of Justice Building. Thirty-six hours from the moment the doors closed upon her the headlines of the San Francisco Examiner were screaming an exposure of shocking conditions in that hospital. For the supposed sufferer was no other than Winifred Sweet, who wrote under the pen name of Anna Louise, the original "Sob Sister," and who took this method of getting hidden news. This method of news gathering is approximated in the Fox romantic drama "Sob Sister," which opens on Thursday at the King's Theatre. James Dunn newest screen sensation, and Linda Watkins head the phony's large and brilliant cast. "Sob Sister" was adapted for the screen by Edwin Burke who wrote the sparkling dialogue for "Bad Girl," and directed "Daddy Long Legs."

But his urgent desire to see the freshly laundered shirt seemed now unattainable. Linda apparently had been unable to detain their guest long enough to give him a free hand, but perhaps he himself could prevent Shaughnessy from going upstairs. Then there always would be the chance that he could help over again, unseen, and complete his investigation.

"Hello, Shaughnessy!" he called cheerfully and thought that an actor he was improving. Not all the laurels could go to the artful Linda. "Are you coming to tell me there's a telephone call?" The other, not unnaturally, looked startled.

As Tom offered his cigarette case he neatly blocked the narrow door.

"Thought Boyle might have been heard from," he explained. "I'm afraid we're in for the evening, Shaughnessy. That fellow's a bad egg and if he can make things uncomfortable for us he will. Has Mrs. Averill said anything about staying over?"

"No. I spoke to her just a moment ago."

"Oh, Linda!" Tom raised his voice in a rather hearty shout and thought he observed a flicker of surprise in the other's eyes. Somehow he had to keep this man downstairs and occupied until he could get back. To his delight Linda appeared at once at the door and Tom dropped his arm familiarly over the Irishman's shoulder.

She caught her cue instantly. "Isn't it exasperating?" she asked with every evidence of annoyance. "I'm so sorry, Mr. Shaughnessy! I've just spoken to the others and I want to ask you too—would you stay over to-night? We should love to have you and then his being so late will make no difference."

As she repeated her invitation of a few moments before Tom managed to direct them all slowly but definitely toward the house. The effort of doing so and preserving his ordinary outward calm brought beads of perspiration to his forehead. Now they were at the door. Linda had caught on that he wanted her to stay. Shaughnessy inside—would they succeed? He hardly noticed whether the Irishman was agreeing to her request or not so desperately was he concentrated on getting the man inside and keeping him there.

Just then Rosie, like an angel of rescue, appeared at the screen door.

"Dinner is served, ma'am," she said and retired into the shadow.

With hospitable heartiness, Tom flung back the door.

"Fine!—I'm hungry, in spite of tea. Go ahead, Linda. Step in, Shaughnessy. Want to wash your hands?" He flung open the door of the little hall lavatory.

"Right in here," and he hurried ahead to join his wife.

"Whew, what an escape!" he whispered. "Hurry up—did I act all right?"

"You're positively pale," Linda answered hastily, hearing steps on the floor above, "but you did all right otherwise. Straighten your tie."

Tom mopped his brow. The steps were coming down the stairs. "I'll tell you later. Keep him here after dinner, Binks. I didn't

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

As I have mentioned before, the new duplicate laws provide for a 100 point premium for making a less-than-game contract. This is generally termed by the players themselves the "100 point part-score bonus."

This 100 point premium lives up the bidding, draws both sides into the bidding, and adds a great deal of colour to the game.

The new duplicate laws will not become official until Feb. 1, 1933.

It has seemed in the past that the only real thrill in contract was in making a game or slam, but now it will be just as interesting to play the non-game-going hand.

The Bidding

Mr. Karn in the South opened the bidding with one club. Having two biddable suits, the longer suit is the proper bid.

West overcalled with one heart. North passed, East passed, and now Mr. Karn, in the South, bid one spade.

West passed. Mr. Sims, in the North, now bid two diamonds.

Remember that on the first round of bidding, he had passed. This bid of two diamonds clearly marks his hand: he is well satisfied to play the hand at hearts; his diamonds suit is not especially strong, and he does not have normal support in either clubs or spades.

Furthermore, his bid of two diamonds will allow Mr. Karn to select the suit at which he desires to play the hand. Mr. Karn decided that even though his club suit was six long, the honours in spades were worth the try, so instead of bidding three clubs, he decided to play the hand at two spades.

You will notice that, with this powerhouse hand, he made no attempt to force the bidding, but signed the hand off with a spade rebid. This became the final contract.

West's opening lead was the king of hearts. He then switched to a small spade. Now, how would you play the hand if you were the declarer? Mr. Karn made three odd at spades.

To-morrow I will give you another of the hands played in the national tournament, and will explain how Mr. Karn made three odd with this hand.

COLD SNAP AT WUCHOW

BELOW FREEZING POINT

Wuchow, Jan. 16.
This morning, Wuchow entered on its fifth day of severe cold weather, with the thermometer at times falling below the freezing point.
Residents say that this is the coldest snap Wuchow has experienced for several years. The extreme weather is causing great hardship among the poorer classes of people because of their lack of appropriate clothing.—Our Own Correspondent.

WUCHOW MAKES PROGRESS

STREET WIDENING SCHEME

Wuchow, Jan. 16.
The local authorities are continuing their programme of modernizing Wuchow by widening another of the city's streets. Excavation of the prospective street is now in progress and it is expected that before long it will be opened for public traffic.
New generators are now being installed in the plant of the Wuchow Electric Company, and it will only be a matter of a few weeks before the new machinery will be functioning in the power house.—Our Own Correspondent.

At yesterday's meeting of the Revenue Club, Mr. P. L. Collier, Colonial Auditor, gave a most amusing talk on "Red Tape and Green Pen" which threw many humorous sidelights on Government auditing work.

VETO OVERRIDDEN

INDEPENDENCE OF PHILIPPINES

SENATE PROVIDES A SURPRISE

Washington, Jan. 17.
Confounding political prophets, the Senate to-day, by the required two-thirds vote, passed the compromise Philippines Independence Bill over the veto of President Hoover, following the example set by the House of Representatives.
Sixty-six Senators voted for overriding the veto and only 27 recorded their votes in favour of the President's views.
As a result, the Bill becomes law and complete independence for the Philippines will be achieved within from ten to thirteen years, provided the Philippine Legislature accepts the Bill within a year.

VICTORY FOR TARIFFISTS.
If the Philippines Legislature rejects the American Congress proposals, as the Philippine House of Representatives has indicated it will, the whole problem will be thrown back into the melting-pot.
The passage of the Bill in Washington is considered a victory for American agriculturists, especially the sugar interests, who are very jealous of Philippine competition and anticipate that when the Philippines are granted their independence, tariff walls will be erected in the United States against Philippine products.

ARMY CHANGES

NEW CHIEF OF GENERAL STAFF

London, Jan. 17.
Field Marshal Sir George Milne will relinquish his appointment as Chief of the Imperial General Staff on February 15th.
On that date, General Sir Archibald Montgomery Mainguard will leave the Adjutant-General's office to succeed him, and on the same day General Sir Cecil Romer will take up his duties as Adjutant-General.—British Wireless.

that the Bill has been passed over the President's veto, believing that its rejection would have opened the door to an even better Bill from their standpoint, giving independence earlier, when President-Elect Roosevelt assumes office. Other opinion is that the Philippines are lucky to have got what they have been given.

General feeling appears to be that it is just as well that the Philippines will have an opportunity of examining the Hawes-Cutting Bill "to see whether they like it or not."—Reuter.
